The French Socialists

What are the French Socialists like anyway?

Guy Mollet, Socialist leader, who wrung from Gen. de Gaulle a vague promise of legalism, and then made his own party the key to the premiership, will serve as an illustration.

He was the son of factory workers. He became a teacher of English. He wrote an English grammar. He contributed papers to educational publications. He has been deputy and mayor of Arras, which was Robespierre's old town.

But the Socialist party is no longer a workers' organization. It has not been for a good many years. Of its voting strength of 3,250,000, only 30 per cent are manual workers. Ten per cent are farmers. The remaining 60 per cent is made up of government workers, pensioners, white collar workers, small shopkeepers and intellectuals.

This mixture has undergone a change roughly comparable to what has happened to much of labor in the United States. It has moved from a position of socialist reform, such as featured the early days of the New Deal, to one of white collar comfort.

French Socialists have become increasingly middle-class, rather than revolutionaries.

In a sense this has happened to Socialist parties in Germany, England, Italy and Holland.

A Weakness

As it is a weakness of the French Socialists, so it was to the Germans in the election of last summer. And, for that matter, it was a weakness of U.S. Democrats in the 1952 and 1956 campaigns.

David Shoenbrun, in his book, "As France Goes," wrote of talking with Leon Blum, venerable French Socialist leader in 1948.

"Why has your party lost so many votes since its peak at liberation in 1945?"

"What have we to offer nowadays," replied Blum, sadly and wearily. "The Communists are Socialists, the Catholics are Socialists, even the Fascists call themselves 'National Socialists.' Everybody's a Socialist. We shall have to invent a new word or a new idea."

That new idea has not come along . . . in France, or anywhere else in Europe. And, while the analogy is not exact, there are labor leaders in America who are similarly waiting. The U.S. Socialist platforms of a generation ago long have been written into law by the New Deal and kept then by the GOP.

The Socialists of Europe today have no social ideology. Many of them, including prominent leaders in France and Britain, no longer argue for complete nationalization. They see the tremendous industrial concentrations of our day requiring trained and expert managers.

Lacking a revolutionary flame, such as the old Socialists possessed, or a militant ideology such as the Communists offer, the Socialist party has slowly lost strength.

Postwar Error

European Socialists, who worked with the Communists in resistance against the Nazis, did not make the postwar error of Socialist parties in middle Europe. They did not accept the Communist embrace. Those parties which did were soon squeezed to death, their leaders jailed or killed.

In Germany Socialist leaders denounced the Communists as "Hitler's blackshirts now wearing red shirts." The French Socialists expelled the Communists from the government, in which they won places after Gen. de Gaulle's walkout in early 1946. It was a Socialist government, too, which broke the strikes of 1947 by calling out the army. This led to a split in the Confederation of Labor. They saved the Fourth Republic from communism—but they did so at great cost.

More than any other party the Socialists deserve credit for keeping communism out of government. It was undoubtedly this fear, of a popular front and class warfare, which caused the Socialist leadership to accept De Gaulle's promises—much as they distrust him. He was, to them, the lesser of two evils.

The great tragedy of France is that the Catholic party and the Socialists have never been able to make effective common cause. If they are not in the days ahead, then indeed will the Fourth Republic die.

Traffic Toll Hits 7 in Georgia as 341 Die in U. S.

Seven persons were killed in Georgia traffic, while the nation's toll reached 341 fatalities for the Memorial Day weekend.

California paced the country's highway slaughter with 28 traffic deaths. New York reported 24, Texas, 25, Illinois, 19, Ohio 18, Pennsylvania, 19, Florida, 17, and Alabama, 12 which included a Gainesville, Ga., man.

GEORGIAN IN ALABAMA

The Georgian was Arthur Smallwood Jr., 33, who was killed Saturday when his car ran off the highway south of Cullman.

Another Georgian, Alex Parsons, of Ft. Benning, was killed in a crash near Inverness, Fla., in which two other persons died.

The nation's holiday traffic count began at 6 p.m. Thursday. The National Safety Council urged motorists to "slow down and live" as the holiday moved into its final hours.

The Georgia fatalities, listed by the state patrol, were:

Bennie Arthur Cox, 20, of Rte. 2, Athens, killed Sunday when a car went out of control on a curve and overturned on top of him two miles north of Athens.

I. B. Davis Jr., 9, of Rte. 2, Unadilla, killed Sunday when he ran out from some high weeds into the path of a car two miles west of Unadilla.

Mary G. Bentley, 16, of Rte. 1, Lincolnton, killed Saturday night when a speeding car overturned on Lovelock Rd., west of Lincolnton. Two were hurt.

EXPRESSWAY WRECK

Jackie Brittingham, 12, of Atlanta, who died in a hospital Saturday night of injuries suffered earlier in the day when a pickup truck wrecked on the North Expressway in Atlanta. His father was injured critically.

Bennie Lee Salesberry, 7, killed Saturday when he ran into the path of a truck near his Waynesboro home, according to the patrol.

Daniel O. Daugherty Sr., 77, was fatally injured Friday night when struck by a car in north-east Atlanta.

Fred Van Bridges, 10, of Augusta, struck by a car and killed while riding his bicycle Friday.

Linda, 7, his sister, riding the bike with him, was injured.

19,000 Volts Hit Lineman At Substation

A Georgia Power Co. lineman was burned severely Sunday when a transformer carrying 19,000 volts of electricity exploded at a substation at 910 Hall Pl., NW, police said.

He was identified as E. A. South, 26, of Ellenwood, near Stockbridge.

Patrolmen S. R. Smith and D. Fuller said they heard a loud noise and a scream, then saw smoke coming from the power company substation. The policemen met Robert Bennett running from the rear of the plant, shouting for an ambulance.

South was on the ground. All his clothing was burned or torn from his body. He was singed from feet to head, and two fingernails were burned off.

The foreman, H. S. Hamm of 1166 E. Rock Springs Rd., told police that South was climbing up a 20-foot ladder to work on a transformer and thought the main switch had been pulled.

The transformer exploded and South was burned and knocked to the ground by the 19,000 volts of electricity, police were told.

An ambulance rushed South to Emory University Hospital where he was reported in "serious" condition.

The Malignant Heart

Dead Paula Was My Only Foe, The Only Person I Ever Hated

By CELESTINE SIBLEY

CHAPTER 2

I said murder is my favorite assignment. But up to now it had always been somebody else's murder—a pitiful stranger dead and another pitiful stranger in jail or on trial. But the murder of Paula Reynolds took murder out of the abstract and made it seem awfully, awfully concrete. Having it happen on my desk with my copy spindle was probably part of it. Having Garrity found on the scene and now snoring away his boozed old heart in greatest jeopardy was certainly some of it. But the most of it, I knew, was that it happened to Paula, who had cluttered up three of the

Pact Ends, Ford Work Unaffected

Ford workers in the Atlanta area joined General Motors and Chrysler hourly-rated employees in working without a union contract Monday morning as United Auto Workers' contracts with Ford and Chrysler ran out at midnight.

Spokesmen at the Ford plant pointed out there was no midnight shift here, but said that workers would report on the job later in the morning despite failure to agree on a contract.

DRAMATIC TURN

Negotiations at Detroit took a dramatic turn when Walter P. Reuther, president of the UAW, personally moved into the discussions for the first time since talks opened April 1.

As time ran out on the old contracts, Reuther told reporters: "We are prepared to work without a contract at all three places until such time as the companies show they are ready to bargain."

The GM contract ran out Thursday midnight without a settlement but workers here continued on the jobs Friday without a contract. There were no reports of any difficulties at the GM Chevrolet plant in Atlanta and the Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac plant at Doraville.

SEVERAL CITIES

Atlanta was one of several cities at which meetings were held Sunday afternoon to brief local union officers, shop stewards and committeemen to tell them how to carry on without a contract.

In a letter to Ford hourly-rated workers, including those in Atlanta, Henry Ford II, president of Ford, said normal operations would continue, but several union functions would be curtailed.

Ford added there would be no effort to "break the union" or influence workers in the choice of the UAW as their bargaining representative.

Involved in the contract negotiations are a total of 100,000 Ford workers, 75,000 Chrysler workers, and 350,000 General Motors employees.

IDENTICAL PROCEDURE

The three companies followed an identical procedure in negotiations. Each offered a two-year extension of the current contract with 16 cents in wage increases spread over that time. They did not increase the offer in weeks of bargaining, but alluded to the recession.

The UAW originally asked for wage increases, improved pensions and increased pay for laid-off workers. It did not estimate the cost of the package but the auto makers said it would run about 70 cents an hour. The union characterized these estimates as absurd. Auto workers now average $2.43 an hour.

65 Die of Heat

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—At least 65 persons died of sun strokes last week in the east Indian state of Bihar, it was reported Sunday. Temperatures up to 120 degrees were recorded during the hot spell. Serious water shortages also were reported.

better years of my life with rage, resentment, and frustration. As far as I knew Paula was my only enemy—the only person I knew who would intentionally do me dirty and the only person in my life I'd ever assiduously hated. And, I might as well add, I stood alone, or virtually alone, in that regard. Paula rated very high with our community. The publisher of our newspaper and the public adored her. She was beautiful, she was bright, and she emerged from any situation looking like a very noble lady.

Only now, I thought, she was emerging from my office under a sheet on a Grady hospital stretcher, looking not noble but merely dead. She might have been any unglamorous slum girl headed for the morgue. The comparison made me feel more compassion for her than I ever imagined possible. She was a slum girl. As a policeman's daughter who grew up near neighbors to the slums, I should have understood a little better about the drive which hunger and home-

Red Boats Stationed Off Canada

Fish 100 Miles Out in Atlantic

WASHINGTON (AP)—Half a dozen Russian fishing vessels are on constant station about 100 miles off the eastern coast of Maritime Provinces of Canada, near an area marked off with buoys flying small Soviet flags.

Recently, the Moscow government complained to U. S. Embassy officials that an American military plane had flown above one of the fishing craft at what the Russians claimed was masthead height.

OFFICIALS

A highly placed official, who denied this, pointed out in discussing the situation with newsmen that the presence of the Soviet ships and buoys, does not in itself constitute any violation of law. The location, in the general region of the Great Banks, is an area frequented by fishing fleets of a number of nations.

However, U. S. naval and air officers look upon the Soviet operation as having curious aspects.

NEVER VARY

Regardless of season and of whether fish are present, the number of Soviet vessels never seems to vary much. When one ship departs another takes its place.

American officials have in their possession a photograph made of one of the buoys by a Canadian helicopter. A copy was turned over to American officials by the Canadians. So far as can be determined by analysis of the photograph, the buoy seems to be a conventional marker, without visible evidence of electronic gear to register ship or aircraft movements.

There seemed a possibility that the Russians might be using the buoys to place their vessels in propped location—or perhaps as range points for observation of American and Canadian ship and aircraft movements.

Atlanta Man Drowns in Lake Lanier

Constitution State News Service CUMMING — A 48-year-old Atlanta drowned in Lake Lanier near here early Sunday afternoon while swimming.

Forsyth County Sheriff Loy Barnett identified the victim as John H. Cabe of 3048 Sage Rd., Southwest.

Cabe had gone to Lake Lanier for a weekend of fishing with J. M. Trotter and his three sons, all of Red Oak.

Trotter told police that he had gone to check on some fishing lines when he heard his boys yelling and screaming. When he arrived on the scene, Trotter said Cabe was struggling in the water and the boys were attempting to reach him with a fishing pole.

Cabe's body was later pulled out of the water and artificial respiration was administered both on the scene and at a Gainesville hospital.

Funeral services for Mr. Cabe will be at 3 p.m. Monday in the Union Christian Church. Surviving are his wife, the former Gertrude Vinola Ives; four sons, Luther and Johnny C. Cabe, Atlanta; Robert E. Cabe, East Point; Raymond Cabe, College Park; two daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Eileen Cabe, Atlanta; parents, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cabe, Atlanta, and four sisters: Mrs. L. D. French Crisis Being Solved GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—The United States Sunday night expressed gratification "the French crisis is now being resolved" with election of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as premier.

That sentiment was expressed in a White House statement issued by associate press secretary Anne Wheaton.

She telephoned the statement from Washington to newsmen accompanying President Eisenhower who is spending the weekend here at his farm.

The statement said De Gaulle is assuming heavy responsibilities at a critical point in French history.

It added the United States looks forward to continuation of "intimate and friendly relations which have always characterized our long association with France."

De Gaulle Is Elected; Asks 6-Months Rule

As Paris Leftists Riot

190 Seized And Dozens Are Injured

By W. GRANGER BLAIR

PARIS — Communist-inspired riots erupted in Paris Sunday a few hours before the National Assembly voted to install Gen. Charles de Gaulle as premier of France.

The outbreaks commenced at 3 p.m. in the working-class quarters in northern, eastern and southern sections of the city. At almost the same moment the tall, aging general rose to deliver his investiture speech in a jammed and tense Parliament ringed by armed security guards.

THREE HOURS

For the next three hours hundreds of police, packed in heavy vans, rushed to trouble spots to clash with the demonstrators. From all reports the riots were the most serious to have occurred in this troubled capital since the crisis began 20 days ago.

Many persons were injured — "several dozens" according to police—including 25 members of the security force. Some 190 rioters were arrested.

Besides those ready for action in the streets, the mobs were replenished by leftists from industrial suburbs who entered the city by train, bus, subway, trucks and on foot. Even before they arrived police, who had been alerted, descended on key train, bus and subway exits.

NORTHERN PARIS

The first clash between security forces and rioters took place in the northern section near the Porte de Clignancourt. Several hundred demonstrators tried to force their way south toward the center of the city through four van loads of police. Both sides struck out with clubs. After 15 minutes of confused fighting the leftists retreated northward.

These rioters, like others elsewhere in the city carried anti-Gaullist placards and shouted slogans as "Down with De Gaulle," "Vive La Republique" and "Fascism Shall Not Pass." The latter catchword particularly is associated with Communist demonstrations.

While fighting was going on in the northern section, mobs were building up in the eastern part of the city around the Place de La Republique and the Place de La Bastille. The same thing was happening in the south near the Place d'Italie.

Overhead, at very low altitude, a police helicopter and single-wing

DE GAULLE ADDRESSES FRENCH ASSEMBLY Asks Power for Six Months To Restore Nation's Health

Algiers Chief Blasts Cabinet of De Gaulle

By THOMAS F. BRADY

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

ALGIERS—Leon Delbecq, vice president of the All-Algerian Committee of Public Safety, said Sunday night the De Gaulle cabinet was "not yet the government of public safety we hoped for."

Looking at the list of De Gaulle's ministers, he told reporters: "You call that a government? Who is the Minister of Interior, a functionary? Who is the Minister of Foreign Affairs, a functionary?"

(Emile Pellier, the new interior minister, is a former prefect. Maurice Couve de Murville, foreign minister, is a career diplomat. Both are considered non-political "technicians.")

Delbecq was expressing the bitter disappointment that is felt among the civilian leaders of the European insurrection here at the liberal moderation shown thus far in De Gaulle's assumption of power. No one associated with the "public safety" movement appears on the cabinet list.

He said the reason the De Gaulle cabinet as constituted was not "a government of public safety" was a question "of personalities." Despite the fact that he did not appear to approve of functionaries, Delbecq said members of the government of public safety should be "above parties."

Nevertheless he expressed his "confidence" in De Gaulle and said he regarded the cabinet as a "step" toward the ultimate goal.

He denied a report he had written De Gaulle protesting against the personalities in the new cabinet. He said he had written the general a letter every day for the last three days but did not indicate the contents except to say he had informed De Gaulle of the situation in Algeria. He added that he had received no response.

Col. Charles Lacheroy, spokesman for General Raoul Salan, military ruler of Algeria, hailed Sunday as a day of victory because

Indonesia Rebels Claim 3 Planes

MANILA (AP)—The Indonesian rebel radio claimed Sunday three government warplanes were shot down while raiding the town of Djallolo, on Halmahera Island in East Indonesia, Thursday and Friday. The broadcast, from Manado, North Celebes, said two F51 fighters and a 25 bomber were knocked down.

be set up to house some of those evacuated.

Police ordered the evacuation as flames from the blazing tank car spread to a grain elevator adjacent.

The blast caused heavy property damage. Virtually every window in this farming community was broken, chimneys were toppled and some power and telephone lines felled.

The blast shook houses in Clinton, 21 miles distant, and in other communities.

It occurred as the cars on an Illinois Central Railroad freight train were being switched. Cause of the explosion had not been determined.

The explosion tore a hole about 35 feet across and 50 feet deep, according to police.

His Victory Is 329-224 In Assembly

By ROBERT C. DOTY

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)

PARIS—The French Parliament turned over to Charles de Gaulle Sunday the fate of France with powers to remake its fourth republic.

The National Assembly voted 329 to 224 to accept the leader of the wartime French liberation movement as premier.

Approved at the same time was a 15-member cabinet including three former premiers, representatives of seven parties—left, right and center—and five nonpolitical technicians. Most noteworthy of the latter was career diplomat Maurice Couve de Murville as foreign minister.

De Gaulle returns to power 12 years after renouncing the provisional presidency in 1946, at the moment when France faces the threat of civil war by civilians and military leaders dissatisfied with government efforts to end a Moslem rebellion in Algeria.

ACCEPTS TERMS

By investing him, the assembly implicitly accepted the terms outlined by the tall 67-year-old soldier in a seven-minute speech to the packed, breathless assembly at 3 p.m. Sunday. He demanded:

1. Six months of full decree power, free from parliamentary harassment.

2. Immediate action to revise the constitution in a manner to permit submission of subsequent sweeping reforms, transforming the parliamentary regime into a presidential one, directly to the people by referendum.

3. Authority to submit to the people in the same way reforms of the French union, permitting new forms of association with overseas territories such as Algeria and Central and West Africa. This was widely interpreted as a plan opening the possibility even of full independence to some areas.

MEETS WITH COTY

Soon after the assembly vote was announced at about 9 p.m. De Gaulle met with President Rene Coty and his cabinet at Elysee Palace while a violent thunderstorm lashed the capital. During the cabinet meeting a bolt

Let Neutrals Join Talks, Soviet Asks

Would Add Prague, Warsaw To Atom Test Ban Parley

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia has proposed to President Eisenhower that experts from Poland and Czechoslovakia and possibly some neutral countries such as India be included in forthcoming scientific talks on means of enforcing suspension of nuclear tests.

Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles, it was reported, will consider this and other proposals by Soviet Premier Khrushchev regarding the talks in a conference at the White House Monday.

SPACE LETTER

The proposals of the Soviet Premier were set forth in a three-page letter delivered here Saturday and put under immediate study by administration officials. Their initial reaction, it was learned, is that nothing in the points raised by Khrushchev offers any serious barrier to starting the scientific discussions by middle or late June.

Eisenhower had suggested in a letter to Khrushchev May 24 that the talks be started in three weeks. He named three eminent American scientists to participate and suggested that scientists also should be included from Britain and France and possibly some other countries. But he said that selection should be on the basis of scientific competence in the field of detection of nuclear explosions and not on the basis of political considerations.

LIKE OPPOSES GENEVA

Administration officials said the principal points of the Khrushchev reply are these:

1. Khrushchev would like to have the talks held in Moscow. Eisenhower had put up Geneva, Switzerland, as the site. The wording of the Khrushchev letter on this point indicates that he is not insistent about it.

2. Khrushchev mentioned inclu-

3. Khrushchev also raised the possibility of including scientists from neutral countries such as India.

Home on Leave, Elvis Says Motto Now Is 'Have Tank, Will Travel'

MEMPHIS (AP)—Pvt. Elvis Presley, a drafted rock 'n' roll idol turned sharpshooter, said Sunday night his Army slogan will be: "Have tank, will travel."

The million-dollar-a-year singer, now a rookie with eight weeks of basic training behind him, stepped out of his $100,000 mansion for a chat with fans who besieged the main gate.

The 23-year-old singer gingerly clutched infants thrust at him by beaming young parents and chuckled dutifully at wisecracks about Army haircuts and reveille.

Presley wore his trim uniform. Sharpshooter medals for rifle and pistol glittered on his chest. He is scheduled for advanced training as a tank crewman, with overseas duty in Germany.

He spent most of the day sleeping, tucked by a welcome home party that climaxed a tiring journey. He arrived from Ft. Hood, Tex., last midnight, driving one of his big cars.

He found about 150 fans, most of them squealing teen-age girls, clustered at the gate of his suburban mansion.

Leaning on the horn and grinning through rolled-up windows, Presley eased the auto through the crowd. Teen-agers clutched at the bumpers and thumped the windows. He kept going.

Upon arrival he slipped into slacks and shirt, spent several hours in gay reunion with relatives and friends and gnawed peanut butter and banana sandwiches, a delicacy he yearned for while in training.

A fellow rookie, Pvt. Rex Mansfield, 22, of Dresden, Tenn., rode with Presley on the long drive from Ft. Hood. He spent the night at the mansion, moved on to Dresden Sunday.

De Gaulle Will Run Show Appointments Indicate

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

PARIS—The composition of the cabinet named Sunday by Gen. Charles de Gaulle suggested that he intended to keep the political direction of vital ministries in his own hands while skilled technicians carried on day-to-day operations.

Under De Gaulle's guidance, Maurice Couve de Murville, former ambassador to the United States and now in Bonn, will direct the foreign ministry; Emile Pelletier, prefect (administrator) of the Seine (Paris) Department, will direct the interior ministry; Pierre Guillaumat, senior official of the French Administration of Energy, will have the defense ministry; Bernard Cornut-Gentille, veteran colonial administrator, will take over the ministry of overseas France, and Andre Malraux, writer, art expert and ideological wanderer from the extreme left to Gaullism, will be De Gaulle's information minister.

Named ministers of state and expected to serve as a sort of board of political advisers to the resolutely political general were four old-line politicians. They are Felix Houphouet-Boigny, leader of the African Democratic Rally; Louis Jacquinot, a leader of the Independent Party; former premier Guy Mollet, Socialist leader who fought successfully to swing almost half his party behind De Gaulle, and former premier Pierre Pflimlin, of the Popular Republican Party, the man who bowed out to make way for De Gaulle.

Another former premier, Antoine Pinay of the Independent Party, was named finance minister and given a large grant of authority by De Gaulle to act in the financial crisis, almost as menacing to the nation's health as the threat of armed insurrection from Algeria.

Completing the cabinet were an old-time militant Gaullist, Sen. Michel Debre serving as minister of justice; Sen. Jean Berthoin of the dissident Radical Party, minister of national education; Deputy Paul Bacon of the Popular Republican Party, minister of labor; Socialist Deputy Max Lejeune as minister for Algeria, and Deputy Edouard Ramonet, Radical Party, minister of agriculture.

'Asparagus' or Upstart, De Gaulle Is Complex

By GARVEN HUDGINS

PARIS (AP)—His schoolmates called Charles de Gaulle "The Asparagus." His military colleague called Col. Charles de Gaulle a young upstart. But a foresighted marshal of France said of De Gaulle:

"One day France will call him." The call has come. And like the man

Warlike Leader himself it was shadowed in controversy.

Now, at 67 and graying, 6 feet 4 and a little paunchy but still erect, Charles de Gaulle is at the helm of troubled France.

Frenchmen, buffeted by the political storms of 25 postwar governments, look desperately for a clue to his intentions.

One might be found in the single-minded statement he wrote in his memoirs:

"To take action on one's own responsibility, to want no mark upon it but one's own, to face destiny alone—this is the harsh, exclusive passion of a leader."

The impelling personality behind this declaration has never ceased to be a controversial figure since schoolboy days when classmates, teasing him for his height, dubbed him "The Asparagus."

The controversy became even more intense when, shortly before World War II as an "upstart colonel," De Gaulle jolted the French high command with a revolutionary proposal: Abandon the massive French army in favor of a small, highly mobile, mechanized professional corps.

Some elder members of the General's Staff never forgave him for saying, after the disastrous defeat of 1940: "I told you so."

But no one could honestly deny that De Gaulle had a point. Nazi Panzer divisions swept through France using the very methods De Gaulle had outlined in one of his military treatises.

Distant, reserved and taciturn in individual contacts, De Gaulle is known as a cold personality. But he can soar to heights of emotional fervor in a speech, despite his habitual, gangling motions.

Now as never before the man who lacks the Frenchman's usual vivacity is many things to many men.

His friends and supporters see him as the inspired leader who can take France out of the morass of political decadence and raise her to the glory so dear to the Gallic heart.

They remember him as the man who saved the honor of the republic in its darkest hour with a simple statement in 1940: "France has lost a battle, but France has not lost the war."

They remember him as the uncompromising Frenchman who would not submit to defeat, who vitalized and led the Free French through the rest of the war, who demanded that France be treated as an equal partner in the Big Four.

They see him as the man who restored the vitality of the republic and who will protect it from menaces both within and without. But his foes see in De Gaulle's single-mindedness and disdain of compromise a potential dictator—a one-track military mind grasping for absolute power in the tradition of Napoleon. The label of Fascist was pinned on him long before his vigorous opposition to the Soviet Union and communism.

But the chief thing worrying many in France is the military-civilian group in Algeria which paved the way for his accession to power: Gen. Raoul Salan, military commander in Algiers, paratrooper Gen. Jacques Massu, who set up the first committee of public safety, Adm. Philippe Auboyneau, commander of France's big Mediterranean fleet, and Jacques Soustelle, long-time Gaullist supporter in the National Assembly.

They are not, by even the most friendly estimates, regarded as what might be called great democrats. Those who oppose De Gaulle claim these are men who might deny France many of her cherished democratic traditions in a headlong rush for personal power.

Others recall De Gaulle's misguided postwar scheme to try and counterbalance the United States by playing up to Russia, which he visualized as the logical helpmate in future attempts to check German aggression.

De Gaulle later admitted he was wrong in trying to play ball with the Soviets. The Russians, he said, were unreliable.

But nobody denies that De Gaulle is first, last and always for France. He clearly would like France to be less dependent on the United States and Britain. He definitely favors a strong executive, modeled on the U.S. system, to restore some kind of stability in France. He passionately wants France to take a place as a respected world power.

To achieve this, he says, Frenchmen must close ranks, discipline themselves, work harder. France no longer can afford successive political crises, industrial strife, civil division. The Fourth Republic's constitution must be amended, giving more authority for the executive.

De Gaulle is not the man to put up with the traditional parliamentary bickering of French republics. He got a belly full of it in 16 months as president-premier of the provisional French government after the German occupation. He finally stalked out of the job after Communists tied his proposed military budget in knots. He retired to his estate in eastern France to await the call the marshal said would come one day.

Trade Bill Next on List

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON — Administration supporters hope this week to see the $3,068,900,000 foreign aid authorization safely through the Senate and then concentrate on passing the five-year foreign trade extension through the House.

The prospects for the first appeared brighter Sunday than for the second. The aid bill without major change may be passed by the Senate by Thursday. The trade bill may not be passed in the House until well into the following week, and then only with drastic changes that could provoke a presidential veto.

Senate debate on the aid bill, already started last week with major speeches by the chairman of the foreign relations committee, Sen. Green (D-R.I.), and a top-ranking Republican H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, has indicated that much of the controversy may center around an amendment authorizing aid to Communist bloc nations.

This amendment, a broadening of the battle act that now prohibits such aid except when the President certifies to Congress that it is necessary for national defense, would permit a much broader interpretation.

As written into the bill by the Foreign Relations Committee it would permit economic assistance to be extended to all Communist nations except Russia, Red China and North Korea, providing the President decided the aid would assist them to become more democratic and more independent of Communism.

The Senate Republican leader, William F. Knowland of California, has introduced an amendment to knock this committee amendment out of the bill and retain present restrictions of the battle act. He is expected to have support for this move from both sides of the political aisle.

Tunisia Gets 'Not Now' On Request for U.S. Guns

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Tunisia recently asked the United States for machineguns for her police, an authoritative source said Sunday, but the answer was, "not now."

Nevertheless, the informant told a reporter, pro-Western Tunisia is hopeful that she will get U. S. support for action in the U. N. Security Council to stop clashes on her territory between French and Tunisian forces.

On the other hand, the United States also will be under pressure to back NATO-member France when the Council meets Monday to consider French and Tunisian cross-complaints growing out of such clashes.

The Tunisian complaint charges French forces stationed in Tunisia and neighboring Algeria have subjected Tunisia since May 19 to acts of armed aggression. The French counterclaim accuses Tunisia of breaking a February standstill agreement relating to 20,000 French troops remaining in that former French protectorate. It says Tunisia provoked clashes through troop movements and the arming of civilians.

SEN. TALMADGE ADDRESSES GRADUATES AT GA. STATE CEREMONIES

World Sees U.S. as Busybodies, Talmadge Tells Ga. State Grads

Americans are paying a heavy price for trying to substitute words for wisdom, dollars for deeds and bluster for good faith, Sen. Talmadge said here Sunday.

Ridden by debt and fear, the people are faced with ever-encroaching bureaucracy at home and are regarded as meddling busybodies, he said.

Sen. Talmadge spoke at graduation exercises of Georgia State College Sunday afternoon in Municipal Auditorium.

He called for the development of "an America so strong militarily, economically and spiritually that any nation choosing to attack us invites not retaliation but annihilation." With this must come a "return to the principles of individual freedom, free enterprise economy and government . . . which is servant of the people."

Internationally, he said, "we have undertaken to make the world over in our own image."

"Is it any wonder . . . that our Vice President is stoned in South America; that our diplomatic buildings are sacked in the Middle East; and that our enemies depict us throughout the world as a nation of neurotic, meddling busybodies who attempt to buy what we are unable to earn and to preach what we ourselves are unwilling to practice?"

He saw just as dark a picture at home where, he declared, "we have permitted the development of a sprawling, ever-encroaching federal bureaucracy which has steered the nation on the road to bankruptcy and totalitarianism."

Nor, he said, have the people fared well. Despite their fine automobiles, television, high fashion, ranch-style houses and the like.

"We have become," he asserted, "a nation plagued by stomach ulcers and heart attacks; the clamor for the benefits of the welfare state have stifled individual initiative; personal debt and national crime have reached an all-time high, and . . . the Golden Rule is something which is printed on advertising rulers."

Talmadge traced history to make the point that any nation seeking "to control the destiny of the world at the expense of its own citizens has fallen from within or without."

"It could happen to the United States unless we change our course," he said.

"It will happen to Soviet Russia unless that country changes its course."

The senator said he had detected signs of a national awakening and predicted a return "to the fundamentals of constitutional government."

Talmadge said that Georgia State College is the embodiment of the American tenet that an individual's achievement is limited only by his own energy, ability, initiative and vision. He pointed out that about 75 per cent of the students work at full or part-time outside jobs.

"Credit for what has been accomplished here at Georgia State College belongs primarily to one man—your president emeritus, Dr. George M. Sparks," he said. Talmadge also saluted President Noah Langdale as a "worthy successor."

Aircraft Safety Lanes For Atlanta Submitted

"Traffic policemen" of southeastern air lanes have submitted four or five proposals for north-south "preferential" air routes to make air traffic safer in this area.

This was revealed here Sunday by James B. Smith, chief controller of the Atlanta Air Route Traffic Control Center.

Meanwhile, James T. Pyle, Civil Aeronautics administrator, announced in Washington that there would be at least three north-south safety corridors. They would probably be from New York to Miami, Detroit to Miami, and Chicago to Miami.

Smith said that two of the routes would probably come through or near Atlanta—the Chicago and Detroit to Miami routes. The New York route would be closer to the seaboard, he said.

COMPLEX EQUIPMENT

Pyle said that progress is limited on the air routes because of the complex equipment which will take at least two years to install, and the training period for the men who will operate the system.

The routes will be restricted, and visual flight rules, blamed for the several recent collisions and near misses, will not be permitted. No plane may enter or cross the skyway without permission, the top CAA official said in Washington.

MOVING CAUTIOUSLY

Pyle said the CAA is moving cautiously in setting up the skyways because it wants to avoid handicapping military operations or becoming so inflexible that private plane owners can't operate.

Volcano Erupts On Stromboli

STROMBOLI, Italy (AP)—The volcano on this little cone-shaped island off the north coast of Sicily poured out a stream of lava Sunday. It ran down the mountainside and sizzled into the sea.

The eruption began Saturday night, providing a fiery spectacle for scores of tourists, but causing no immediate alarm in the island's two little fishing villages. The lava stream was a mile or more from the nearest.

Stromboli erupts once or twice a year, but has caused no casualties in recent times.

Man at Crossroads, College Seniors Told

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—Man faces the paradox of having to choose a master before he can be free, 400 Wake Forest College seniors were told Sunday night.

The seniors heard a baccalaureate sermon by Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist Church in Atlanta and former president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Dr. Newton said that "Man, to be free, must acknowledge a master—a master of his choosing. If man does not exercise his right to choose, he will nevertheless, serve a master, fixed and imposed . . . by the effective people of this world."

A yacht designer can be excused for a little exuberance

When you work in the satisfying world of sweeping lines and clean, lithe hull designs . . . it's very easy to feel your pulse race a little at your first sighting of a magnificent Imperial.

You'll have to drive it . . . to see if it can possibly live up to the teasing, beckoning promise of its hull. But look for more than a smooth sail on well-paved highways and eager power for passing and magnificent interiors. Imperial's excellences go a great deal deeper.

Look for twisted roads that test the flat, sure cornering of Imperial's torsion bar suspension. Guide it along choppy trails and know its long-muscled competence. Reach for controls and instruments and find them there . . . right where logic and your own sure instinct say they belong. Set Auto-Pilot to warn you of the speed limit or to hold you at a steady turnpike pace while you let your right foot rest. And above all, expect to be surprised. Even your best imaginings are likely to fall far short of the grand realities with which an Imperial can intrigue you.

Remember Issues And the Candidates!

Adoption of rules by the State Democratic Executive Committee which set the qualifying deadline for candidates as June 21 for the Sept. 10 primary officially launched the 1958 political year. It promises to be an interesting campaign, with a lot of politicking and promising, oratory, barbecue and hash.

Already many candidates have qualified for statewide posts. There will be many more. Out of it will come the officials and legislators charged with the sacred trust of running the state. That is why voters themselves should accept the campaign not as a three-ring circus but as a dead-serious affair which affects their pocketbooks and their lives.

There is always a lot of hoopla connected with Georgia political campaigns. Voters not only like to see their candidates but expect to be entertained. This vaudeville atmosphere often becomes confusing as candidates, adept at demagoguery, brush over the real issues and hope the voters will forget there are any.

This year there are some very real issues indeed.

Georgians must be concerned with the growing laxity, waste and extravagance in state administration. The need for a return to morality in government, to economy and efficiency, to government for the people instead of for the politicians, to administration of services so that taxpayers at least get an even break—all these and more are the real issues.

Voters of this state surely must be a disillusioned lot. They have been promised economy in government and get tax increases instead. They have been promised a fair shake for all the people and get a modern-day version of the spoils system unsurpassed in recent history.

So Georgians this year should do more than just listen to impassioned oratory. They should remember the man with the voice also is the man whose hands might control the purse strings over their public funds.

This year the voters should try to remember the issues as well as the candidates. It might pay off.

There Will Be Market For the Well-Trained

This week marks the peak of the commencement season.

The high schools are well along with graduation exercises. They'll be winding up this week and next. The colleges are getting into the swing and will be passing out honors and diplomas for the next 10 days.

The time is right for reminding young people that education is a continuing process. Now, more than ever, the training must go on.

To drop out of school and take a job either before the diploma is in your hands or after the high school diploma is in hand is tempting.

There is much reason these days not to succumb to the temptation.

An atomic, automated age demands skill. The market for unskilled labor becomes less with each technological development.

Then, too, jobs will be harder to find this season because of what we hope and believe is a temporary employment slump.

Take advantage of the lull the better to prepare yourself. The market for able, well-trained men and women will always be there. In boom times or bad, the going always is rough for the second-raters.

Judge Will Tune Ear To All the Evidence

An Indiana judge assigned to preside at a highway bribery trial in the Hoosier State has prepared himself by buying a special hearing aid.

Explaining the acoustics in the courtroom are not good, the judge said, "My wife thought I might be a bit hard of hearing and I sure don't want to miss a word of that case."

Cheers now for the Hoosier judge! And for all officials charged with enforcing the law who refuse to turn even a slightly deaf ear to the evidence around them.

YMCA Building Fund Gets Boost in DeKalb

The Metropolitan Atlanta YMCA fund drive for $3,250,000 is getting a special assist from DeKalb County.

Leaders there have set out on a "Follow-up Campaign" to raise $100,000 within the DeKalb "family."

Reaching that goal will assure DeKalb County its own new YMCA building. At the same time the $100,000 will be counted in the over-all "Y" Centennial Building fund total, thus helping the fund on its way over the top by July 1.

With the $3,250,000 in sight, "Y" executives can speed work on the 15 projects proposed in the program.

The Greater Atlanta area has come through admirably in the campaign for capital funds with which the YMCA can pace the population growth.

The special effort in DeKalb County is an especially gratifying demonstration of community spirit.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle Is the Last, Best Hope

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, resistance hero of France during the second great war, has become the 26th Premier of the Fourth Republic.

With the Communists grimly abstaining, the Socialists provided him with the necessary votes to attain office with legality rather than by a coup d'etat.

The general does not please everyone. Most Frenchmen accept him with reservations. But whatever he may be, he is the last best hope of a sick republic. The French government has been largely impotent and frustrated because there was no system of checks and balances. The executive had almost no power. The Chamber of Deputies had almost all constitutional provisions in its hands. Yet because of the many political parties the French parliament was a farce.

If Gen. De Gaulle can reform the constitution, making it nearer our own with its admirable system of counter balances, he may save France. And let none of us deceive ourselves, saving France is important to Western civilization.

The problem is massive. The French economy is in precarious condition. The war in Algeria can be settled only by complete political integration of all Moslems in Algeria. This will require tremendous expenditures in salaries, schools and in election and maintenance of perhaps 100 new deputies in Paris from Algeria. The estimated cost of all this is roughly three hundred million dollars.

The Western world can do nothing more than assist Gen. De Gaulle if he provides the opportunity. If he seeks to take France out of the West and make of her a neutral "third force," he will fail and endanger all his present allies.

But he is the last, best hope. And since we are all a part of the future, we cannot do otherwise than assist... if he will permit it. Neither France nor the world needs a "mystic" De Gaulle who seeks to be a masculine Joan of Arc. We need an immensely practical, able man dedicated to a future of freedom and alliance.

Tax Equalization Is A Constant Problem

Squabbles about taxes are as old as the device of taxing itself. But the wide disparity in taxable values to support local governments in Georgia is a continuing problem to which there apparently is no solution.

There are, of course, differences in economic capabilities between counties. But the differences are not as great as tax digests show and some of the wealthier counties keep local support of services at a ridiculously low figure. Many of these counties just come to the state capital for handouts and subsidies.

Some counties have had the courage to push through re-evaluation and tax equalization programs. Usually this was from absolute necessity but others were motivated by a genuine civic desire to improve schools and other services. They are the counties where desire for progress outweighed resistance to additional property taxes.

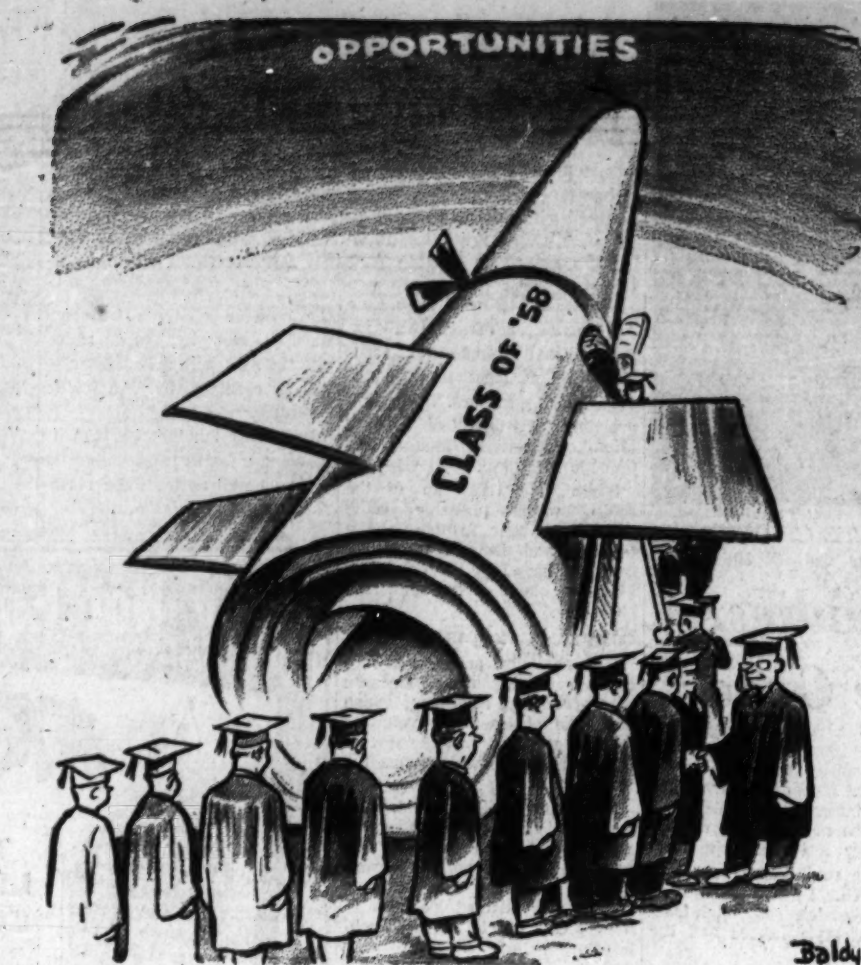

During the Talmadge administration the state removed itself almost entirely from the property tax field, leaving it to cities and counties. Counties, however, have been reluctant to take advantage of their opportunities and look to the state to bail them out.

Down in Coffee County there is a controversy now over re-evaluation of property for taxation. Dissident groups are opposing it, evidently preferring to fight it out with assessors year after year. The most ridiculous aspect of it all is the fact that Coffee County property is valued for tax purposes at only eight million dollars. Coffee is one of the state's more prosperous counties. Its county seat is thriving Douglas.

There should be a more uniform formula throughout the state on evaluation of property for tax purposes. There certainly shouldn't be a penalty by the state against those counties which try to do an honest job, such as is built into the school chargeback formula.

Decatur Citizen Says Monorail Is Key To More Efficient, Fast Transit Service

Decatur—No doubt the Army made many surveys trying to evaluate the usefulness of the machine gun and the airplane and I am quite sure these surveys turned up sound reasons why neither of the two would be practical.

The transit companies throughout our country have had enough surveys made to fill the old Candler Warehouse. However, these costly binders of worldly wisdom have failed miserably to show even a slight trend for the better in the business of transporting John Q. Public to work and home each day.

One basic point all of these surveys will divulge is the snail-paced speed transit vehicles are compelled to maintain due to the numerous normal situations that throttle this industry's service to a mere 9.5 m.p.h.

The transit industry as it is today cannot possibly compete with the comfort, speed and convenience of the private automobile.

To compete, transit service must be at least two to three times faster than the private auto to overcome the speed problem. The increase in speed will help overshadow the convenience and comfort advantage.

The Monorail, designed and built to compete against existing competition, would certainly revive transit travel and aid in the growth of our cities.

The trend of decentralization of the large city is due directly to the inability of transit service to meet the task of moving the people. If not so, how do you explain the tremendous increase in population in our own city and a decrease in transit vehicles of at least 30 per cent in the last five years.

This outback of vehicles in operation is also complemented with a drop in schedules and miles operated by the remaining vehicles. This trend will continue, the value of downtown property will continue to sink with the decline of the big city.

The Monorail is the fastest, safest and most economical approach to the problem.

We don't have to wait for new materials and elements to be discovered. We need a leader, a Billy Mitchell, or better still, a crackpot with vision enough to start the ball rolling.

Atlantan Criticizes Postal Rate Hike

Atlanta—So postage has not gone up in over a quarter of a century, so what?

Are the money-grabbers supposed to go up on letter mail rates every 25 years? For what purpose was the Post Office Department set up?

It was set up to serve the people, especially for business that makes the money to pay income taxes.

Many, many business people, big and small, make their money by mail either directly or indirectly. Sales, service and collections are made by mail.

When these are curtailed, then business is curtailed.

W. M. JACKSON.

He Wants the State To Purchase Docks

Atlanta—Recently, I noticed an article in which some company has made a bid for a part of the port docks now the property of the Central of Georgia Railroad.

This is no surprise to me, as this is very valuable property, and while the buildings are old, they can be replaced by up-to-date buildings. I am afraid that some men of vision will make a quick purchase and the state will then have competition.

My advice to the Ports Authority is make a quick purchase of the Central Docks and keep competition from our state docks.

CHARLES J. SHELVERTON.

Antifluoridationist Hits Doctored Water

Atlanta—Have just read your editorial suggesting that antifluoridationists show their credentials. Why? I do not like plain mayonnaise. Lots of folk do, but do you think they have the right to spread the stuff on all the bread that I eat or that I have the right to say that they shall not eat it?

I was born in Atlanta in 1897 and have been drinking the delicious "Chattahoochee phosphate" ever since. My teeth are still intact and I do not feel the need of doctoring my water. And that, my friend, is all the credentials I need to justify my opposition to fluoridation.

I have no doubt that the proponents of fluoridation have made a thorough research of the matter and are convinced it will be beneficial to the general public but that does not give them the right to put it in my water.

Grady Thought Well of Cotton

On Oct. 26, 1887, Henry W. Grady was in Dallas, which is where I hope to be when you read this on Monday, June 2, 1958.

That October day in '87, the Georgia editor addressed the crowd at the Texas State Fair on "The South and Her Problems." The discourse included a tribute to the cotton plant.

O. B. Moore Jr. called the passage to my attention. O. B. is director of public relations for the Cotton Manufacturers Assn. of Georgia. Public relations is the art of persuading the public dog to stop barking and start wagging its tail.

Said Henry Grady on "The Cotton Plant":

"What a royal plant it is! The world waits in attendance on its growth. The shower that falls whispering on its leaves is heard around the earth. The sun that shines on it is tempered by the prayers of all people. The frost that chills it and the dew that descends from the stars is noted, and the trespass of a little worm on its green leaf is more to England than the advance of the Russian army on her Asian outposts."

"It is gold from the instant it puts forth its tiny shoot. Its fibre is current in every bank, and when losing its fleece to the sun, it floats a banner that glorifies the field of the humble farmer. That man is marshaled under a flag that will compel the allegiance of the world, and wring tribute from every nation on earth. It is the heritage that God gave to this people forever as their own when He arched our mountains, girt us about with the ocean, loosed the breezes, tempered the sunshine and measured the rain."

"Ours and our children's forever!"

"As princely a talent as ever came from His hand to mortal stewardship."

O. B. Moore says even the prophetic Mr. Grady in the "measured rain" did not foresee the tremendous growth of cotton in the former deserts of the West.

Nor synthetics yet.

It's late for National Cotton Week and for the immortal editor's birthday, but the cotton tribute is still Grady and still good.

I LIKE THIS: "Most performers know that the best answer to the worst criticism is a good performance."

Estes Kefauver Is Enigmatic Person

WASHINGTON—Independent, indefatigable, insubstantial and inexplicable—all these large adjectives best describe Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. He is an independent politician as ever twice ran for the Democratic presidential nomination. When he sought it in 1952, he had arrayed against him the top leaders of the two most powerful wings of the party—the Northern organization bosses and every last one of the Southern elders.

The story was about the same in his next try, 1956. But this time, though Adlai E. Stevenson won the top prize from the Democratic Convention, Kefauver got the vice presidential nomination.

He is thus not quite a two-time loser—having been in 1956 in the "place" position with Stevenson in the "win" position.

But the real point on both occasions was that Kefauver was able to survive such massive hostility at all.

An even more arresting point brings this piece to another of the adjectives for him—indefatigable.

His seat in the Senate is up in 1960—and this, of course, he simply has to hold. Thus all his planning must center on remaining in the Senate.

Kefauver's ambition, even at its height, has been the sleepiest-looking in the experience of this writer. But depend on this: Somebody or something—Kefauver himself, his friends or some turn of the wheel of chance—will see to it that he is not altogether out of it.

For Kefauver—and now the adjective "inexplicable" is reached—defies any ready analysis or ready understanding as a political force. Though from Tennessee, he is not really a Southern politician—and not even really a typical border-state politician. So little is he in agreement with the Southerners that for years they excluded him from their informal but real club in the Senate. Even now he only timidly "pokes his head in occasionally."

His speech, particularly in the Senate and to some extent on the stump, is largely an amiable muttering and murmuring to most of his audience. His memory for first and last names—and a keen memory is supposed to be a politician's special requirement—is so bad as to be almost unbelievable.

This correspondent remembers crossing the Kefauver trail in Wisconsin in the 1956 campaign. There this tall, gangling, gaping outlander seemed as alien to the upper Midwest as one could possibly be. But everywhere he went, and no matter what he said or seemed to say, he left the stolid Wisconsin farmers in broad, fond smiles.

As there is enigma in his personality, there is enigma in his Senate record. He has cast, wisely or not, some of the bravest Senate votes in its postwar history, particularly against frightened actions in the field of subversive control and immigration.

On the other hand he has seemed to have missed a good many votes altogether. And nearly always about him there has been, to one observer, a faint, genial confusion. This correspondent has never felt sure he understood in the least where Kefauver was going on some issues, and why.

Dedicated Spirit Brings Happiness

In his book, "The Pure in Heart," Dr. Sangster tells the story of Henry Martyn, who has been called the "most heroic figure in the English Church since the time of Queen Elizabeth I." After a brilliant career at Cambridge he heard the call to the mission field and tossed aside half a dozen possible careers to answer that call. He prepared himself for India in a spirit of complete dedication.

Then something else happened.

He fell deeply in love with a girl named Lydia. He told her of his love for her and also of his orders from heaven. Would she go with him? Together, they could do great things for God.

She would not go. If he stayed in England she would marry him. If he went to India, he must go alone. So the question hammered in his brain: "India or Lydia? Lydia or India?"

He chose right. He went to India and he went alone. He never again knew such love as he had known for Lydia. She married someone else and forever was beyond his love. For the remainder of his life there was the burden of that disappointment. Yet in the midst of that pain he said, "My dear Lydia and my duty called me in different ways. Yet God hath not forsaken me. I was born for God only. Christ is nearer to me than father or mother or sister." And I am sure he said, "Thank Lydia, either."

The decision of Christ in Gethsemane comes to each of us. For Henry Martyn it was Lydia or India. For us truly to love God may mean the giving up of this possession or that pleasure or the rendering of this service or the walking in that way of life.

Could Jesus have refused the cross? I have a friend whose love for his wife has deepened through the years. They found great joy in many activities together. Then she was stricken with a crippling disease and has become an invalid. Caring for her involves great sacrifice for him. Could he refuse to care for her? Because of his love, he gives himself to her. Before he could turn his back on service to her, he would have to destroy that love. And as long as Jesus loved God, he could not refuse the cross.

When one of us loves God in the right way, neither can we refuse His will. The real decision is never the cross, rather it is who do we love—ourselves or others, ourselves or God. Love sacrifices itself, it is willing to be consumed in giving and in service. Service always means suffering in some way and to some degree. The cross inevitably lies in the pathway of true love. The Gethsemane decision means living to ourselves—it also means living for God.

Although the dedicated life is costly, it also is the happiest life.

And Besides, They Have Last Word!

Women, I have been told by a non-male source, are getting more important every day. The first inclination was to hoot at this announcement, but my Southern upbringing with its emphasis on chivalry matters grudgingly restrained me from such a boorish reaction. Instead, I greeted all my teeth and said in an even tone, "What do you base your argument on, Ma'm?"

"Well-I-I," she said, dragging the word out as though it were an all-day sucker, "to start with, women are smarter than men."

I had to call on the Mason-Dixon Line, magnolia blossoms and Robert E. Lee to maintain my calm. "Just what do you mean?" I finally asked, trying by inflection to give the idea she was an absolute lunatic.

Then she pulled out a report which she had ready all the time that stated Southern women are better educated than Southern men. This was staggering news but I managed to conceal my dismay.

The Census Bureau report, from the U.S. Department of Commerce office in Atlanta, declared in the formal language of government handouts: "Females in the South's labor force of the age of 18 years and over in 1957 had completed an average of 11.7 years in school, or the equivalent of a high school education, compared with only 9.7 years on the part of their male counterparts."

(Something's got to be done about this Department of Commerce.)

"Just because they have been to school longer doesn't mean they're smarter." I blustered, fighting for time. "Besides, did you ever hear of a woman inventing an automobile, an airplane, an atomic power plant or anything useful?"

She wasn't even momentarily flustered. "No," she said, "but women own more corporation stock—in the companies that make those things—than do men."

"It was willed to them by men," I countered.

"They've got it," she said. "Yakity, yakity, yakity, she kept going. 'Do you realize that women comprise a third of all the people working in Atlanta and in addition they are busy having babies and raising families?'"

I said, "Huh."

Somewhere along the line she said women were better drivers than men and hustled out some figures to prove it. I glowered, clenched my fists and hummed "Dixie" under my breath.

Women, she said, were more tranquil than men, they didn't have ulcers and they lived longer.

"Say," said I, "what do you think about the public transportation system in Nairobi?"

Hall County Sues U.S. Over Flooded Land

A $2,700,000 suit against the government as a result of lands flooded in the Buford Dam project is scheduled to begin Monday in Federal District Court at Gainesville.

The suit, filed by Hall County, contends that the creation of Lake Lanier deprived citizens in four areas of Hall County of roads previously available to them.

The lake, the suit adds, created problems of traffic "which are not the responsibility of this county to solve." County commissioners say that 42 miles of road were inundated by the lake but only 16 miles have been replaced so far.

Mao Seen Losing Role In Peiping

Polish Paper Cites New Line

By SYDNEY GRUSON

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)
WARSAW (AP)—The Polish weekly Swiat 1 Polska (The World and Poland) said Sunday that the "drastic extreme" of Communist China's attitude to Yugoslavia was apparently caused by internal difficulties in the Chinese party.

This comment seemed to reflect the belief of many Polish Communists that a significant shift of forces sidetracking Mao Tse Tung from direct party activity has recently occurred in the Chinese party.

OFFICIALLY NO. 1

Officially Mao Tse Tung is still the Chinese Communist No. 1 man but increasingly of late the party line has been laid down by Liu Shao Chi. It was Liu Shao Chi who ordered the crackdown on the Chinese "rightists" that spelled the withering of Mao's "hundred flowers" doctrine.

Mao seems to have played little or no part in formulating Chinese Communist ideology since his two major innovations of nearly two years ago. Both have since been ended.

One was the invitation for an open clash of opinion summed up in the call to "let a hundred flowers bloom, let a hundred schools of thought contend." Second was Mao's contention that "contradictions" between various classes must exist in socialist as well as capitalist society.

UPHOLDS STALIN

It was Liu Shao Chi, not Mao, who made the major report to the recent Chinese party congress condemning the Yugoslav Communists' ideology in violent terms. The congress upheld the justice of the sanctions imposed on Yugoslavia by Stalin in 1948. Later the Russians themselves conceded that these sanctions were a mistake.

Golf Recharges Ike, Hagerty Says on TV

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower is going to keep on playing golf to "recharge his battery by getting out into the open air" and away from the burdens of his office.

"He needs the exercise; he is going to continue to play golf," presidential press secretary James C. Hagerty said Sunday. Hagerty discussed the President's golfing on a transcribed television interview with Rep. Kenneth Keating (R-NY).

He said the President doesn't pay any attention to suggestions of some that "he plays too much golf and has too long vacations."

He termed "completely ridiculous" rumors that the President might retire before the end of his term, calling most of the rumors and reports politically inspired.

Abolish Presidential Primary, Adlai Urges, Calling It Useless

NEW YORK (UPI)—Adlai E. Stevenson, who lost two bids for the White House, called Sunday for an end to the presidential primary as an almost useless institution. He said it was far too costly physically and financially and did little but destroy some candidates. The titular head of the Democratic party proposed as an alternative giving the voters a larger role in the choice of delegates to nominating conventions by letting them choose the delegates in elections in every state.

Stevenson spoke in a filmed and recorded interview series titled "Survival and Freedom" carried over the American Broadcasting Company Network and produced in cooperation with the Fund for the Republic, which operates on a grant from the Ford Foundation.

"I think the presidential primary... is almost a useless institution," Stevenson said. "I am not by any means persuaded that the presidential primary is a good thing to have."

But outside the government general building, in the forum that has been the scene of regular mass demonstrations ever since May 13, when European insurrection brought the committee of public safety into existence, there was only a scattering of persons and no sign of rejoicing.

Asked why there was no celebration, Lucien Neuwirth, official spokesman for the public safety committee, said the day is Sunday. People are at home.

Last Sunday, however, the people of Algiers thronged the forum.

None of the generals or civilian leaders who have made it a daily practice to harangue the people from the balcony of the government general building appeared Sunday afternoon.

Heart Trouble Leading Cause of Death

Heart trouble as the cause of death leads all others in this country, and is responsible for twice as many deaths as cancer which is second high.

The increase in heart trouble can be traced to three primary causes: first, changes in the blood produced by foreign sera; second, wrong hygiene, e. g., not enough rest, dissipation, excitement, worry, and emotional stress; third, mechanical irritation of nerves leading to the heart caused by direct or indirect spinal injury at some former time.

The spinal nerves control and coordinate the rhythm and function of the heart to the needs of the body. Many heart symptoms can be traced to an unbalanced spinal nerve supply caused by nerve irritations.

A chiropractor is especially trained to locate and remove nerve irritations. A healthful and extended life is assured when all things relating to the welfare of your body are taken care of.

Mother, 2 Sons Saved From Overturned Boat

GRAFTON, Ill. (AP)—A mother and her two young sons were trapped for three terrorizing hours Sunday in their overturned cabin cruiser on the Mississippi River near here.

They were rescued by two men who swam through 50 feet of choppy water. Using an ax and saw they chopped a hole in the bottom of the boat through which the trio escaped.

The victims were Mrs. Marcus C. Bauer, 37, and her two sons, Ronald, 15, and Michael, 10, all of Belleville, Ill.

Their rescuers were Harry Roither and George Garrett, both of St. Louis.

Mrs. Bauer's husband and another son, Mark, 16, were thrown clear when a sudden wind, described by Mrs. Bauer as a small tornado, swooped down on the 32-foot cruiser.

Mark and Bauer swam to shore but the others were trapped in the upside-down cabin, clinging to walls as murky river water lapped at their chests.

Roither was attracted by Bauer's cry of "Mister, my family's in there. Will you help me?" and he pointed at the overturned partially submerged boat.

Roither swam to the boat, chopped an air hole in it with an ax, returned to shore for a rope, and he and Garrett again swam to the boat with a saw. They enlarged the hole and the trapped family was helped to shore.

Mrs. Bauer's only comment was "I thank the good Lord."

Macmillan To Fly to U.S. for Talks With Ike on Approach to De Gaulle

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan flies to the United States this week for talks with President Eisenhower that take on a new aspect with the developments in France.

They can be expected to decide on a joint approach to Gen. Charles de Gaulle in an effort to insure his loyalty to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Western military strategists are privately worried about the future of some defense bases—especially in North Africa.

Macmillan and Eisenhower know De Gaulle personally and got along surprisingly well with the tough general in joint dealings with him during World War II—dealings concerning North Africa and particularly Algeria.

Eisenhower was Allied commander at the time; Macmillan was Winston Churchill's personal envoy to the Middle East.

With the emergence of De Gaulle as French leader again, The Observer, an independent and influential Sunday newspaper, brought out in the open a fear felt among many diplomats here.

"The danger," said the Observer, "lies... in that, by trying too hard to curry favor with Gen. de Gaulle and keep France within the Western Alliance, we may be lured into supporting French policies in North Africa which will antagonize all the peoples of Africa, Arabia and Asia."

Griffin May Try Race For Governor in 1962

By WILLIAM M. BATES

Constitution Political Editor

Gov. Griffin has all but confirmed what many political observers have long suspected: that he is planning to run for governor again in four years.

Though he is barred by the Constitution from seeking a second consecutive term in his present office, few persons who know Marvin Griffin the man have ever believed he will abandon a life-long political career when he walks out of the governor's office in January. Politics are too much a part of his existence.

William M. Bates

But where does he go from there?

There was a time when some persons thought Griffin was casting covetous eyes on Sen. Richard B. Russell's seat and might oppose him in 1960. That now appears unlikely. Russell has been shoring up his political fences at home during the past year and appears to be in a strong position. The close relationship bordering on a political alliance that has been forged between Russell and his new colleague, Sen. Herman Talmadge, has strengthened Russell's position considerably.

It would probably take something not now in the picture to entice Griffin into a race with Russell.

Before, during and immediately after this year's session of the Legislature there was considerable speculation that Griffin might seek the office of lieutenant governor this summer. Nothing in the state Constitution would specifically prevent him from seeking that office, although there might be a legal question of Griffin's eligibility to succeed to the governorship in the event of the death or disability of the governor.

SOUND REASONING

Some sound political reasoning was advanced to support the theory that the lieutenant governor's office held advantage for Griffin. It would give him a springboard to make a comeback for governor in 1962 and to defend the record of his administration should it come under fire by his successor.

The governor never conceded he was even toying with the idea of seeking the No. 2 office. Nor has he ever closed the door completely on the possibility. But little has been said of it recently.

If Griffin still entertained any thought of running, it is doubtful that Rep. W. Colbert Hawkins of Screven County, the governor's House leader, would have entered the race for lieutenant governor.

But some observers won't discount entirely the possibility that the governor will jump into the contest at the last minute. He will have until June 21 to do so.

NOW LAYING PLANS

It appears more likely, however, that Griffin is now laying his plans to make a political comeback for governor in 1962. This was a subject of published speculation during last winter's legislative session. It drew no definite response from Griffin one way or the other.

But last week, at a press conference, Griffin publicly acknowledged the possibility he will run for governor four years hence.

He did so in backhanded fashion. He accused the Atlanta newspapers of trying to smear him and destroy him politically now in order to keep him out of the 1962 race for governor.

The papers, Griffin said, "know there will be no diminution of the country unit system as long as I am sitting in this office. They know there will be no white and Negro children sitting together in schoolrooms, so they say let's kill him so he can't run four years from now."

Griffin could hardly have made it clearer that he is looking ahead to 1962.

How he would fare in a comeback attempt then would depend, to a large degree, on how badly and permanently he has been scarred by recent charges of irregularities in his administration.

If he is able to reverse before he leaves office the stream of bad publicity that has sent his prestige tumbling, he would be a real factor in the future politics of Georgia and in the 1962 governor's race.

But if he is unable to recoup his lost prestige while still in office, the progressive accomplishments of his administration may be forever eclipsed in the public mind by the alleged misdeeds. In that event, his comeback potential will be hampered severely. Griffin would be faced with the same political fate that befell former Gov. E. D. Rivers.

Chinese Girl Seeks To Die For Father

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—A 15-year-old girl has appealed to the Supreme Court for permission to be executed in place of her father, a widower, so that he may support her younger brothers.

The father, Chia Ling-shu, is one of three men sentenced to death for robbing and murdering a bank cashier after inducing him to steal $20,000 in U. S. currency. An appeal against the verdict was rejected by the Supreme Court earlier in the week.

In ancient times there were cases in which the Emperor of China, moved by the filial piety of children, spared their parents from death. Under modern Chinese law, there is no provision by which a child may die on behalf of a convicted parent.

State Vacations Called Rocking Chair Variety

Georgia's recreation spots are mostly of the "rocking chair" variety, a television panel decided Sunday, with but one dissenting vote.

"There were 800 people at the dance last week up in Rabun County," panel member Eddie Barker said. "You can't exactly call that the rocking chair type of recreation. It was down right lively."

Press Gallery, WSB-TV panel show, sponsored this week by The Atlanta Journal skipped the usual question-and-answer format Sunday for a discussion of vacation spots in Georgia.

IN ATTENDANCE

In addition to Barker, those in the informal roundtable were Penr. Worden, project director, Georgia State Chamber of Commerce; Burton Bell, technical liaison officer for the Army Corps of Engineers; Margaret Shannon, Journal staff writer, and Ernest Rogers, columnist. Editor Jack Spalding was moderator.

Rogers said that his favorite vacation spot was Warm Springs, where the hotel "has 48 rocking chairs on the front porch. I'm going out for rocking chair champion this year. I'm sort of the indoor type of vacation seeker, anyway."

Outdoor recreation is available at many places in Georgia, but the night life sort of thing that characterizes the plush Florida spots is in short supply, the panel agreed, with Barker casting the slightly dissenting vote.

ALLATOONA LAKE

Bell said that 2,000,000 people visited Allatoona Lake last year, and 2,500,000 visited Clark Hill Lake. "Lanier will take some of the 'pressure' from these lakes," Bell said. "Atlanta has come to be recognized as the inland boat capital of the world."

Worden told of the Georgia State Parks now open to the public, some with over-night facilities. He said that an interest in history was bringing tourists to Georgia, and also getting Georgians out on the highways to visit historic spots.

COUNTRY HAM

Miss Shannon said that her two favorite spots to visit in Georgia were Savannah, because of the "delightful shrimp dishes" and Blairsville, because of the "delicious country ham."

The panel agreed that whether moved by culinary arts, scenery, or outdoor fun, there are plenty of spots in Georgia for any vacationer.

Pressured Libya

MOSCOW (UPI)—The trade union organ Trud said Sunday that Libya turned down a 15-million-ruble loan offer from the Soviet Union because of American and British pressure.

(The arbitrary rate of exchange set by Moscow is four rubles to one U.S. dollar).

The newspaper said the offer was made during Soviet-Libyan negotiations in March, 1956. It said the Soviets also offered to sign a favorable trade agreement and provide Libya with two hospitals.

But the Libyans rejected the Soviet offers under the influence of the United States and Britain, it continued.

It was learned that the Lever Brothers company wants to sponsor a Gleason show and has entered into discussion with CBS. The comedian is under contract to the network.

'Your Hunch' Is New Type Quiz Show

Special to The Constitution

NEW YORK—Play Your Hunch, an intriguing new slant on quiz games, featuring Merv Griffin as master of ceremonies, premieres over the CBS television network Monday, June 30.

With the viewers at home playing along, the 10 a.m. show will call upon contestants to use their powers of intuition in answering questions posed by Griffin. Two husband-and-wife teams in the studio will try to outguess each other and the first couple making three correct guesses will win the round and the right to "pull straws" for expensive gifts.

Five of the seven giant-size straws will be longer than the others and each will represent a valuable prize. If the winning couple picks all five long straws before a short one, they will receive a bonus. Once a short straw is drawn, the couple must face new challenges.

Emcee Griffin will present to contestants such puzzlers as... from among three pictures of babies, pick the one who is a prominent personality. From among three small children, choose the one child with two front teeth missing. From among three men wearing turbans, select the man who is bald.

Play Your Hunch is a Mark Goodson-Bill Todman production in association with the CBS television network. Bob Rowe is the producer and Lloyd Gross the director of this five-day-a-week show.

De Gaulle Is Elected Premier, Requests Powers for 6 Months

struck the Elysee, short-circuiting the lighting circuits set up by photographers.

At the end of the meeting before 11 p.m. the cabinet sent three texts to the assembly for adoption with a demand for urgent consideration. The Assembly adjourned however, at 11:52 p.m., postponing consideration until Monday. The bills covered the special powers proposal, revision of a constitutional article to pave the way for referendums on later changes and the renewal of special powers in Algeria, first granted to the Mollet government two years ago and renewed for each succeeding cabinet.

In the Gaullist entourage the need for haste was explained by the concern over the possibility that the insurrectionists in Algeria and Corsica might still attempt a coup d'etat even after the investiture of De Gaulle, the man they have been acclaiming since the movement began May 13.

The Assembly voted power to De Gaulle without enthusiasm but apparently in the belief it had no hope elsewhere. Socialists, Communists and other left-wing spokesmen declared that the assembly was not voting freely but under threat of "insurrectionists."

The Communists and fellow travelers cast 147 votes against De Gaulle. Forty-nine Socialists, 18 radical socialists and a scattering of others joined the opposition.

The Socialists split down the middle, with 42 voting for De Gaulle. He had support from Independent-Republicans, Conservatives, Popular Republicans, Gaullists, Poujadists, and an assortment of middle-road splinter groups.

De Gaulle sketched rapidly a black picture of the outlook for France. "Degradation of the state, French unity menaced. Algeria plunged into a tempest of trials and emotions. The army scandalized by the absence of power in government. France's international position severely jeopardized. France menaced by dislocation and threatened civil war."

"It is in these conditions that I offered myself for the attempt to conduct the state and the republic once more for the salvation of the country, and, designated by the chief of state, I find myself to ask the National Assembly to invest me for a heavy task," De Gaulle said. "For this task, means must be provided."

He outlined his demand for special powers and his proposal to disperse the assembly until its next regular session Oct. 7. Most urgent, he said, was the revision of Article 90 of the Constitution which now provides that constitutional revision must be first approved by both the Assembly and the council before submission to the people by referendum. With this modified to permit direct consultation of the electorate, De Gaulle said subsequent amendments dealing with the basic structure of the institutions would be based on three principles:

1. Universal suffrage is the source of all power. This was reaffirmation of the general's basic devotion to democracy.

2. Executive and legislative powers must be effectively separated so that government and parliament each assume and effectively fulfill their full functions.

3. The government must be responsible to parliament.

In return for the large grant of power he demanded, De Gaulle offered the political leaders an eight-point pledge covering the use he would and would not make of them. This was reported to the Assembly today by Pierre-Henri Teitgen of the Catholic Popular Republican Party in these terms:

1. De Gaulle had promised that France's treaties, notably those embodying European unification moves such as the common market and atomic energy community, would be maintained and respected.

2. That De Gaulle would never accept being carried to power by the dissident committees of public safety.

3. De Gaulle wanted no other powers than those regularly conferred upon him by parliament.

4. The new premier would insure

AUNT HET

"I'll endure whatever is necessary, even if other folks are treated better'n I am, but I reserve the right to be mad about it."

that in Algeria and Corsica those in defiance of the Paris government would be brought back to discipline and order "in the service of the republic."

5. He promised to respect the liberty of labor unions.

6. The full powers conferred on him would not be used, the general said, to interfere with the personal rights and fundamental liberties.

7. De Gaulle asked full powers only for six months and agreed that during the absence of Parliament its committees should sit permanently to survey government actions.

8. Finally, the constitutional reforms envisaged would respect and consolidate the two fundamental principles of democracy—that all power proceed from the national electorate and that the government was responsible before its representatives in Parliament.

Police Halt Leftist Riot In Paris

observation plane droned from one point of the compass to another, reporting on each new concentration of demonstrators.

In the heart of the capital, police were put in a state of instant alert as guards centered in the Place de La Concorde and around the National Assembly listened tensely over police radios to reports of trouble at more outlying points.

Subway exits around the assembly building were sealed. One officer, his face set, said: "It looks like they're moving toward the center of the city from a dozen different directions."

In the Place de La Republique, where last Wednesday's massive non-violent left-wing march terminated, another throng was milling about. Police poured into the area from every side. Some of the demonstrators were dressed in imitation concentration camp uniforms. Others rushed to a nearby florist, cleaned out his shop of flowers, and placed them at the base of the Republican statue in the center of the square. The crowd roared: "Fascism shall not pass."

The throng continued to swell and police moved in. Guards were everywhere, cutting the mob into small groups and forcing them to disperse. There was no serious violence. The police seemed too powerful.

Red China Boats Sunk

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—The Chinese Nationalist navy has claimed it sank two Communist gunboats and one motorized junk in a 12-minute naval action Sunday morning about 30 miles north of Matsu. The Navy said Nationalist vessels, number and type not disclosed, returned to base without damage or casualties.

COMPETITION?

Wait 'til you hear about Steel!

That stag line could go twice around the ballroom before it outnumbered the steel companies that are in constant competition with one another.

Actual count shows over 250 companies in manufacture and sale of iron, steel or iron and steel products. They're spread all across the country. They employ about 600,000 workers and have well over 900,000 stockholders.

Steel users are "sitting pretty"—lots of places to shop. Every steelmaker must be on his toes.

And, besides all the other competing steel companies, each steel plant is also in constant competition with the producers of other metals here and abroad—and with producers of cement, lumber, glass, paper and plastics.

The Malignant Heart

Paula Was My Only Enemy---I Hated Her

lessness can foment in the ambitions.

My father understood about it and that's what made him a great man and a good enough policeman that even since he caught a stray bullet in a robbery investigation and had come home to spend the rest of his life in a wheel chair, fellow officers continued to come to our house and talk over their cases with him and ask his advice.

I had, I thought, suffered much at Paula's hands, but I should have forgiven much, knowing how it was with her.

I stood there, tentatively trying to feel a decent sense of regret and shame, when the thought of Garrity recalled me.

If he had killed Paula... My compassion for Paula switched sides immediately. Between Garrity and Paula there was no question of my loyalty. If Garrity had committed murder it was no worse than whatever thing Paula had done to him. I gave the Grady Hospital corps time to get their burden into the elevator and then I moved casually toward the ladies' room. The couch in the outer room was empty!

Its saggy cushion still held the depression where Garrity had lain, but Garrity was gone. Then I heard the flush sound off in the next room.

But when the door opened it was not Garrity who came out. It was Mimi Lewis, our exquisite fashion editor, all done up in trailing white draperies for opening night of the Met.

"Kate!" intoned Mimi imperiously in that black satin voice of hers that makes every triviality come out sounding like a business-office must. "Please tell me what goes on. I find the place working alive with policemen. Are we being raided or something?"

I told her quickly and with as little detail as possible. Mimi was one of the Reynolds's faithful, brought over from a modeling job in a department store where

Paula once worked, to write of beauty and body coverings. I didn't put it past her to faint or burst into loud sobs at the news that Our Leader was no more. She did neither. Her long brown eyes grew wide and thoughtful, and she caught her full, velvety red underlip with her quite perfect white teeth and said softly, "Well, what do you know?"

The reaction was so totally different from what I had expected that I just backed awkwardly out of the room and square into Shep, who was standing outside the door.

"Come on, Katie," he said crossly in his night city editor voice. "Let's get with it. Give me your opera story and then let's have Reynolds."

Leading him away from the door which had Mimi on one side and a policeman close to the other, I whispered urgently, "He's not in there, Shep. Garrity's gone. I don't believe he could have made it home under his own steam, do you?"

Shep took a deep breath. "He couldn't have," he said. And then he sighed. "Well, we can't do anything about finding him now. Let's get the paper out."

I trailed him back to the city room listlessly.

The atmosphere in the room outwardly showed little difference from that night on deadline push. People were too busy to talk, but the electric feeling of excitement was there—underneath—waiting to crackle up to the surface the minute the last piece of copy was down, the last head written, the press rolling.

I bent to my typewriter. The color story I had started on the opera had all the brilliance of an undug turnip. But what people wore and thought and said at the opening of the Met would be of slight concern to our half million readers by breakfast time anyhow. Paula Reynolds, the old glory snatcher, would, in death, surpass even such front-page specialists as Patrice Munsel and Rise Stevens.

I pecked out a couple of tired, cliché-ridden paragraphs to wind up the opera story and took it over to Shep, who was, since I had thought of turnips, just about the color of one, a dirty, purplish white. His voice held the routine edge of authority and urgency when he spoke, but his face in the bright light was in a state of collapse. His plain, prim countryman's mouth was out of control, wobbling about in a childish way he couldn't seem to stop, even by grinding his teeth so muscles came and went in his cheeks. His rimless glasses were misted over so I couldn't see his eyes.

"Why, Shep..." I began, and he stood up.

"Better get a move on, Katy," he said in a tone which contrived to sound brusque and businesslike in defiance to that wobbling mouth and the misted-over glasses. "See what Mulcahy's got and let's have it. And what about her husband—did you call him?"

"No," I said. "Not yet. I told you they were getting a divorce. I don't know exactly where to look for him."

"Try the Biltmore," said Shep briefly, and sat back down, his back to me.

It wasn't until I had the operator ringing Elwood Reynolds's room that I thought to be surprised that Shep should have known where to reach him. He had said he didn't know they were getting a divorce, and yet he seemed to know Reynolds would be at a hotel.

Elwood Reynolds answered just as I watched Lieutenant Mulcahy walk out of my office and move across the news room toward me. "Mr. Reynolds," I said, "this is Katherine Kincaid at the Searchlight. I'm afraid I have a shock for you, Uh..."

Mulcahy had quietly picked up the extension on the desk next to mine.

"Yes, Miss Kincaid?" Reynolds sounded sleepy and not too apprehensive.

"Paula... Paula's dead."

"Dead? Dead?" Elwood Reynolds seemed to be turning the word this way and that, examining it for flaws.

"Mr. Reynolds," I babbled. "I'm terribly sorry. We all are. It happened down here at the office. Tonight. Could you come down?"

There was a moment's hesitation. "Yes, Miss Kincaid. Right away. I'll be right down."

"Well done, Katy!" said Mulcahy when we had hung up the phones together. He mimicked me gratefully. "Hello, Mr. Reynolds! I just called up to tell you your beautiful wife's dead—and how are you tonight?"

"I didn't say that!" I cried hotly. "I said..."

I looked up and he was grinning at me in that tacky, presumptuous way all the Mulcahys have. His father and my father were on the police force together and such good friends this second-generation Mulcahy and I didn't have a chance. From the time we were children being taken on department fish fries at Grant Park we had been building up a good case of animosity toward one another—and it hadn't diminished during the years he was away in the Marines and I was learning to be a newspaper reporter.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, Lieutenant," I apologized icily. "I don't have the subtlety and finesse of the homicide squad. If I'd known you were going to be on the phone anyhow, I'd have waited for you to break the news to Mr. Reynolds."

But my sarcasm was wasted on Benjamin Franklin Mulcahy. Sitting there on the corner of my desk, he was apparently listening, but his eyes, watchful and calculating as the hands on a time clock, were busy ticking off the people in the news room.

"About to make an arrest, Lieutenant?" I asked sweetly.

"No," he said quietly. "This will be a matter of reeling out the rope and letting the murderer hang himself. Or... herself, Katy."

Patterson Ordered To Fight

Boxing Group Sets
Sept. 30 Deadline

PARIS (AP)—The world championship boxing committee Sunday ordered heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson to defend his title before Sept. 30 in a bout with one of four top contenders. The committee said that if Patterson failed to comply he would be stripped of his title.

Patterson has not risked his championship since last Aug. 22, when he knocked out Pete Rademacher, making his bow as a professional, in six rounds.

The world championship committee, which links the New York State Commission, the British Boxing Board of Control and the European Boxing Union, seeks to have each championship defended every six months.

The committee Saturday issued its lists of champions and leading challengers. Eddie Machen of Redding, Calif., and Zora Foley of Chandler, Ariz., were bracketed as the top contenders. Willie Pastrano of New Orleans and Miami Beach was listed next, followed by Roy Harris of Cut and Shoot, Tex.

Patterson's manager, Gus D'Amato, could not immediately be reached for comment in New York.

The statement issued by the committee at the end of its annual meeting said: "The period in which the world heavyweight title should have been defended has been exceeded by far. The world championship committee considered that the persistent refusal by Patterson and his manager to defend the heavyweight title cannot be considered as serving interests of boxing in general and Patterson's own reputation in particular."

"In consequence the committee decides that Patterson must defend his title against one of the officially designated challengers (1. Machen and Foley, 2. Pastrano, 3. Harris) before Sept. 30, 1958."

"In the event that Patterson should refuse, the committee will not recognize him any longer as champion of the world and will study in that case what steps to take in application of this decision."

DIAMOND DIARY STRIKER ARMY HITCH HELPS GET 'EM OUT IN SOUTHERN

By CHARLIE ROBERTS
Constitution Sports Writer

NASHVILLE—Fate plays odd tricks on baseball players, and sometimes helps shape their careers.

Jake Striker can't get anybody out for Mobile in 1955. Uncle Sam claims him for the army. A year's absence from baseball cures a very sore arm. In 1956 he comes back as one of the Southern Association's finest pitchers.

The jaw of Lyle Luttrell, Chattanooga's infielder, is broken in 1955 by a lethal punch from the fist of irate Earl Averill, Nashville catcher.

Luttrell sues Averill, gets a $5,000 judgment. He sues the Nashville club for $50,000, is awarded $5,000, a verdict that subsequently is thrown out.

Luttrell, with Seattle in 1957, and Averill, with San Diego, become friends. In 1958, Nashville acquires Luttrell in a trade with Chattanooga for Tommy Brown.

"Best thing that came of it, though," grins Luttrell, "is that I married the nurse of the doctor who set my jaw."

Striker, the lefty who walked only 10 batters while fanning 26 in four recent victories, makes the unusual statement, "I owe it all to the army. I don't recommend that to everyone, but it sure worked wonders with me."

PREDICTION OF WEEK—Bob Hartman, Charlie Gorla and Ken Mackenzie will win more games than any three southpaws on one Southern Association club despite late starts by Mackenzie and Gorla.

Talented George Leonard, Nashville Banner baseball writer, noting lavish claims in Atlanta papers of the "near invincibility" of the Crackers, takes tongue in cheek, typewriter in hand to twit a bit. "These frightening observations which do more than hint at a runaway by Atlanta's Southern supermen make for depressing contemplation. Who knows? Maybe the Crackers' seven rivals will be in a mood to concede by All-Star Game time."

DIAMOND DUST—Nashville's 33-year-old Jim Fridley raised his batting average from .340 to .378 in three games against Little Rock and Atlanta last week, getting 10 hits in 11 trips in one streak. He belted 35 safeties in 86 trips during one long hot spell. . . . It's ironic that Mobile's Dick Stigman and Little Rock's Al Grunwald won their first pitching decisions at expense of the Crackers, paced by left-handed hitters, yet no other southpaw has beaten Atlanta all season. Mobile right-hander Stan Pitula's only victory likewise was over the league leaders. . . . Atlanta fans Monday will get their first look at Tommy Carroll, classy New Orleans third baseman for whom the Yankees shelled out $80,000 in bonus money when he played for Notre Dame.

Mayor DeLesseps Morrison, whose tireless work has kept the Pelicans in his beloved New Orleans despite insurmountable obstacles, says, "I'm going to twit my good friend Bill Hartsfield (Atlanta Mayor) about not being a solid booster of baseball in Atlanta. They say he doesn't try to help the sport along very much."

And, speaking of a helping hand, Bill McCarthy and other Nashville club officials plan to contribute 10 per cent of the gate receipts from three games this week to local churches. Fans may designate the church they wish their money to benefit on the backs of their tickets if they wish to.

SOUTHERN TIDBITS—After Birmingham Manager Cal Ermer's 4-day suspension was lifted, stand-in pilot Danny Ryan quipped, "It's back to the old ladies home (first base coaching box) for me." . . . Some New Orleans scribes took a dim view of the Pels' release of Bob Mackenzie, who led the club in RBI and total bases, was the third top hitter (.289), second in runs scored. He also was tied for the loop home run lead. . . . Birmingham's Howie Phillips reached first base on 17 of 22 trips during one stretch last week. . . . The .397 bat start of ex-Cracker Dick Sinovic for Austin seems to uphold the contention that spring training is merely an expensive luxury. He joined the club just before the season started.

Bob Botz, who started the year with the Crackers, was one of 4 Topeka players suffering minor injuries in an auto mishap on a junket from Colorado Springs. . . . Ex-Southern Looper Dixie Upright is batting 400-plus for Amarillo. . . . Ex-Cracker Chick King hit in 16 straight games for Fort Worth. And Carl Powis had a .353 start in 15 games for Victoria after doffing Cracker flannel. . . . Someone noted that Ken Mackenzie wasn't listed among leading pitchers despite his 2-0 record. Next day he lost to Mobile. The Crackers lefty quipped, "You can quit looking for me among the leaders."

When Jay Hook blanked the Crackers Friday, 4-0, it was his second straight 7-inning 3-hitter in the Dell. He beat New Orleans, 10-2, the other time. He fanned 21 in the two games. Hook whiffed 25 in a 12-inning semi-pro game in Milwaukee last year.

Smarting Giants Turn On Card Nemesis, 7-2

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The San Francisco Giants, smarting from three straight defeats, regained first place in the National League Sunday by stopping the St. Louis Cardinals, 7-2 with an 11-hit attack backing up Johnny Antonelli's pitching.

The Cardinals have been a nemesis for Antonelli the past two seasons, handing him two of his three defeats this year, but it was a different story for the Giant left-hander this time. He ended a four-game St. Louis winning streak and blunted their first division bid.

He was touched for nine hits, but made it tough on the Red Birds with men on base. Ray Jablonski haunted his former teammates with two hits and three runs batted in.

Antonelli, now 5-3 for the season, beat the Cards for only the second time in eight decisions the past two seasons.

He yielded a run-scoring double to Joe Taylor in the second and Gene Green tagged him for a solo homer in the eighth.

Sad Sam Jones, now 3-4 for the season, was the Cardinal starter and loser.

The big toothpick-chewing right hander struck out seven in his six-inning stint, but issued five walks. Daryl Spencer's sixth inning triple scoring Danny O'Connell was the clincher. Spencer then scored on Willie Mays' fly. The Cards beamed at the call, catcher Hal Smith claiming he tagged Spencer in a rolling collision a few feet from home.

Friend's 8th Taps Braves From Top

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates knocked the Milwaukee Braves out of first place Sunday with a 5-1 victory in a game twice delayed and finally called off because of rain at the end of seven innings.

Bob Friend yielded only five hits in coasting to his eighth victory against three setbacks. Heavy showers forced suspension of play for 32 minutes after the Braves had batted in the fifth inning, and for 16 minutes while the Pirates were up in the seventh. The final showers started after Friend had retired one Brave in the eighth.

The victory gave the Pirates an even split in the four-game series with the Braves.

Williams Two-Hits Cubs, 1-0

Yields Only Singles
In Dodger Debut

CHICAGO (AP)—Stan Williams, a 21-year-old throwing right-hander, turned his first major league start into a two-hite, 1-0 shutout of the Chicago Cubs for the Los Angeles Dodgers Sunday.

Williams yielded just two singles. Pitching in 48-degree January-in-June weather fanned by a 20 mph north wind, the native of Enfield, N.H., walked two and fanned three. He hit one batsman.

During one stretch from the third inning into the eighth, the Los Angeles newcomer retired 16 straight Cubs.

Recently returned from the Dodgers' farm at St. Paul in the American Assn., Williams had pitched just three innings previous to his masterpiece. Stan was the American Assn.'s strikeout king a year ago, posting a 19 won, 7 lost record.

Purkey Wins Duel From Sanford, 2-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Cincinnati's Bob Purkey won a pitching duel with Jack Sanford Sunday as the Redlegs defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1, in the first game of a double-header at Connie Mack Stadium.

The second game was suspended by a state curfew with the score tied, 11-11, and Cincinnati batting in the ninth inning. The game will be continued at a later date.

In the opener, Purkey scored his sixth triumph in seven decisions, 6th he said Sanford, whose record is now 4-5, gave up eight hits.

The suspended game was turned into a pitcher's nightmare as 11 hurlers paraded to the mound, six for the Redlegs and five for the Phillies.

The Phils lone score was a home run by Solly Hemus in the third inning.

A Street Of Dreams

The sun was hot on Savannah street so we hitched our chairs under the roof of the "mission," which, so far, is nothing but a roof in the middle of a fenced-in playground. A breeze blew up Pickett's alley and by craning your neck you could see the trees and flowering shrubs of Oakland Cemetery a couple of blocks away.

"Here comes Sylvia," said Sister Henrietta Keel. "I told her you were coming down this afternoon and she wants to talk to you. Sylvia's got pride and she gets mad at the way the newspapers keep referring to our neighborhood as 'slums'."

Sister Keel smiled, her strong, gentle, weather-roughened face looking humorous and affectionate all at once.

"I tell them it's not the street that's a slum. The street is just earth like the good Lord put everywhere. It's the people that make the slum with the way they live on either side of the street."

Sylvia sidled up shyly and took a seat on a bench under the shed, a slim, blue-jean-clad girl in her 20's. She didn't speak and after a minute Sister Keel, who had been busy comforting a little girl who was both tempted and terrified by the prospect of sliding down the sliding board, turned around and introduced her.

"Sylvia's lived on Savannah Street all of her life," explained Sister Keel. "She can tell you about it."

A little at the time Sylvia did tell me, revealing beautiful white teeth occasionally in a shy smile, ducking her short-cropped blond head, squinting her bright blue eyes against the sunshine to keep watch on the three of her own four children who played there. (The baby was asleep at home.)

What Sylvia said was so interesting to me it may take two columns to relay it to you but I think it's worth reporting. Sometimes I think all of us who live in a city are sort of John Gunther types. He writes one "Inside" story after another and, of course, he's inside nothing. What he sees about every place is the obvious superficialities. I went home and read the portion of his "Inside U.S.A." devoted to Atlanta and Georgia and although I could find no fault with the facts and impressions that he set down I kept thinking that he erred to say he was "inside."

We who live in Atlanta are "inside" only such a small part of it. When we move out of our little niche, like Mr. Gunther, we're outsiders, seeing only what we're looking for, understanding little.

For instance, Savannah street and Pickett's alley seem to be a slum to many of us but if we were inside, how would it look?

"I love it," said Sylvia. "I was born in that house on the corner. My husband he was born in that house two doors down—you see the one, the little shotgun house with the clothes drying on the bench. Now we live in that one."

She pointed to a third house, a rickety looking three-room dwelling with a hard-packed yard and no tree to shade it.

"We moved away twice. We tried it in the project and the project apartments are nice and convenient. But I'm a hard person to get acquainted. Seems like I missed Savannah street so much I could hardly stand it... so we came back."

She smiled. "It's better than it used to be when me and my husband was kids. All the houses have toilets now—not showers or tubs or anything—but toilets built off the back porch. And Sister Keel has done a lot to change the neighborhood. Used to be this was an old junky vacant lot and all the men that got drunk would lie out here under a tree cutting up and raising sand."

Sylvia is one of the women on the street who has worked hardest to see that the shelter is built. Church women from all over Atlanta are interested in the program and are campaigning enthusiastically for contributions—anything from the price of a 26-cent concrete block on up. Their interest is good, springing as it does from compassion, but the interest of that shy, blue-jean-clad young mother who couldn't bear to move away from Savannah street is what gets me.

Sylvia worked side by side with Sister Keel, selling to the neighbors contributions of old clothes for a few cents a garment to raise money for the mission.

"Cabbage Town gives $75!" she said with a flash of pride in her blue eyes. "And somehow we're going to raise $25 more."

"Cabbage Town?" I repeated, puzzled.

"This is Cabbage Town," said Sylvia, smiling. "During the depression we had nothing to live on but cabbages. It's not a pretty name but I reckon we earned it."

(Tomorrow: Plans for Cabbage Town.)

Flower Show Depicts 'Six Days of Creation'

By YOLANDE GWIN

The language of flowers, like the language of love, is a universal tongue.

Yet, to many, the interpretation is as varied as the gardens of the world.

Flowers are mentioned in many passages of the Bible. It was this book that members of the Town and Country Garden Club consulted when they began planning their first accredited flower show.

"SIX DAYS OF CREATION"

The result was a beautiful and very unusual show called "The Six Days of Creation" which the members staged at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Braddy Sr., at 5112 Trimble Rd., N.E.

Mrs. W. M. Hinson was general chairman for the event which was held in the greenhouse at the rear of the Braddy property. It was an effective setting with sunlight playing hide-and-seek through the openings.

A large Maypole, significant of the month, offset the entrance. Colored streamers in pastel colors entwined the pole and the spokes leading out in all directions. Hanging from the latter were baskets filled with spring flowers entered in competition by juniors. Taking part were daughters and friends of members.

SUITABLE FOR HANGING

Nancy Davis, a student at the Hammond School, won the blue ribbon in addition to Garden Club of Georgia junior achievement award. The baskets, filled with all fresh material, had to be suitable to hang on a door.

Niches set off the artistic arrangements to carry out the show theme. Classes included "Light," "Heaven," "Land," "Sun, Moon and Stars," "Fish and Fowl" and "Man and Animal."

Mrs. M. S. Kincaid used a foundation of coal to arrange azaleas as a container for a candle to represent "Light." She won first place.

Mrs. Howard Osborne was second place winner and Mrs. Paul Hutchins won third place.

For "Fish and Fowl," the winner was Mrs. H. P. Williamson, president of the club, which was organized in 1949. She combined flowers with a bird cage and a small lake where goldfish were swimming around. Mrs. Williamson also won the Garden Club of Georgia award of distinction. Second place went to Mrs. W. C. Evans.

The invitation class—to arrangers other than those in the hostess club—was "Man and Animal." Winners were Mrs. J. A. Lloyd of the Chatham Forest Club, first; Mrs. C. E. Lambert Jr., Mrs. L. T. Schelver Jr. and Mrs. Joe L. Stradley of the Country Hills Garden Club, second, and Mrs. Philip Mesher and Mrs. L. Walton Robin Jr. of the Red Clay Club, third.

CREATION OF "LAND"

Mrs. E. T. Shropshire, Mrs. M. L. Collier and Mrs. James Keelin were winners, in the order named, in the class representing the creation of "Land."

The sweepstakes winner in the show was the hostess, Mrs. Braddy, whose entry in the class of "Sun, Moon and Stars" won first place. The other winner in this category was Mrs. Frank Lupp.

There was only one winner in the "Heaven" class. She was Mrs. M. H. Godby.

Horticulture played an important part in the show, with many entries of both cut and growing plants. One section, titled "Miscellaneous," had a birdhouse arranged amid greens and shrubbery. On it was a sign which read "For Rent for a Song."

He's Poor Risk as Husband

By DOROTHY RICKER

Dear Mrs. Ricker:

I have been watching your column for some time now, hoping to find a problem like mine. Finding none, I decided to write you myself. I am engaged to Larry, whom I love very much, and I am sure he feels the same way about me. Larry is really wonderful; everything I could want in a husband except for one thing. He is extremely jealous.

At first I found this rather flattering, but it is getting to the point where it is ruining our relationship. He doesn't like to double date or take me to places where there will be other boys. If he does he always seems to find something to get jealous over and our whole evening is ruined. I really make a special effort not to do anything which might aggravate him in any way like flirting, etc.

We have discussed this many times, and both agree it is not a good basis for a happy marriage. He tries not to be this way, but somehow he just can't overcome it. Seeing as how you always seem to find a good solution to most problems, I'm hoping you can help me. I would appreciate any suggestions you might make on how our problem can be solved.

Judging by your letter I believe you are an older teenager and mature enough to know your own mind, but I definitely believe Larry's present attitude makes him a poor risk as a husband. He may love you—but does he love you enough to stop doing these things which could cause him to lose you?

Unreasonable feelings of jealousy can be overcome. He may be trying, but he isn't trying hard enough. Until he does, my advice is to put off any serious thoughts of marrying him. If this problem is not solved before marriage, it will not be solved afterward, believe me.

Strawberry Desserts for June Keep Menus Varied and Tasty

By VIRGINIA DYSAID
Constitution Food Editor

Many pleasant things come during the month of June, but one of the most pleasing is the abundance of strawberries. To keep meals in tune with early summer make strawberry desserts a feature item on the menu.

Bright red, fresh-flavored berries are now on the market at their very best, so they can be found at almost any grocery store or fruit stand. And prices at this peak season are the lowest they will be all year long.

Here are a few recipes with molded fresh strawberry and avocado salad as a feature. It's perfect for the warm weather bridge luncheon or club luncheon.

MOLDED FRESH STRAWBERRY AND AVOCADO SALAD

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water
1 cup hot water
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup fresh orange juice
1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
1 1/2 cups sliced fresh strawberries
1 cup diced avocado
Whole unpeeled strawberries for garnish
Mayonnaise

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add hot water, sugar and salt and stir to dissolve gelatin. Blend in orange and lemon juice. Chill until mixture is about as thick as fresh egg whites. Fold in strawberries and avocado. Pour into a 5-cup mold and chill until firm and ready to serve. Unmold on serving plate. Garnish with whole unpeeled strawberries. Serve with mayonnaise. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

FRESH STRAWBERRIES AND SOUR CREAM

1 quart fresh strawberries
1/2 cup sour cream
1/4 cup sugar

Wash and cap strawberries. Pile into dessert dishes. Top each serving with 2 tablespoons sour cream and 2 teaspoons brown sugar. Makes six servings.

2 eggs, well beaten
1 15-oz. can sweetened condensed milk
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
4 tbsp. lemon juice

Prepare pie crust mix according to package directions for mixing. Roll out on lightly floured surface to 1/8-inch thickness. Cut into 8 5-inch squares. Place on 6-inch squares of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Pinch corners together to form tart shells. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool. Remove foil.

Meanwhile, combine eggs, milk, lemon rind and lemon juice; mix well. Turn into tart shells. Chill. Combine strawberries and jelly; mix well. Arrange over lemon mixture. Makes 8 servings.

STRAWBERRY CAKE ROLL

1 cup sifted cake flour

1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup sifted confection sugar
1 pt. fresh strawberries, sliced
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup heavy cream whipped

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Beat eggs until thick. Gradually add 1 cup granulated sugar, beating constantly. Add water and vanilla; mix well. Add sifted ingredients; beat until smooth. Turn into baking pan approximately 15 1/2 x 10 1/2 inches lined with waxed paper. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes, or until cake tests done. Sift confectioners' sugar over towel. Turn cake out on towel; remove waxed paper. Roll up jelly-roll fashion; cool.

HOW OLD IS SHE? The beautiful and charming Mrs. Herbold is one of many Hollywood women who keep their hair young looking with Herbold Pomade. She looks much younger than she really is. Is she 30-40-50-60? What's your guess?

Amazing Creamy Pomade

Tones Down Grayness Hair Looks Young Again

Gray Hair makes you look older than you really are. But, now you can look years younger by simply using Herbold Pomade as your hair dressing. This amazing creamy pomade tones down grayness and makes your hair look young again; like it did before it turned old and gray.

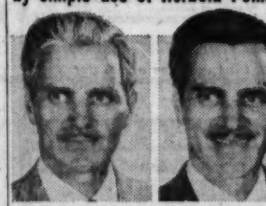

Gray, streaked, drab, mousey hair is re-colored so gradually, and blended so perfectly with the natural color of your hair that no one can tell you are using anything but a fine hair dressing.

It's real easy to do at home. Rub a little Herbold Pomade into your hair, (as you do any hair dressing), comb it—that's all! Do this every day for a week—thereafter, once or twice a week. No long complicated directions, no patch tests, no mixing, no timing, no mess or bother. No confusion about shades. Just one Herbold Pomade, adds the right color for your hair.

Herbold Pomade is not a coal tar dye, tint or rinse. That's why you never have a dyed, artificial look; or a drastic sudden change in your appearance; or grayness next to the scalp showing, when you use this one and only Herbold Pomade.

A wonderful hair conditioner too. Its special Lanolin and fine hair oils are exactly what gray, dry lifeless hair needs, to correct dryness and restore that lustrous, alive, neat look. So if the years have stolen the natural oils and color from your hair, leaving it dry, dull, drab, streaked, or a lifeless gray—or if your hair has been dyed—and looks it—start using Herbold Pomade today. In 1 to 3 weeks your hair will look young again, without a sign of grayness. And regular use will keep it that way, for as long as you like.

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS (MS)

Her wheel chair sets the limits of her world. She is a prisoner in her own home . . . a prisoner of multiple sclerosis . . . MS.

MS—creeping disease that cripples as it creeps. MS—greatest cause of chronic disability among young adults. MS—cause and cure unknown; a lifetime disease. MS—is a mysterious, widespread disease involving the central nervous system. Though it strikes persons of all ages, it hits mainly young adults between the ages of 20 and 40.

Today, top scientists are working tirelessly to crack the mystery of MS, seeking cause, effective treatments and a cure. And science is starting to come up with possible answers. One day, there will be a cure and . . . possibly . . . a preventive. Until then, the Greater Atlanta Chapter of the National MS Society, is carrying out a patient aid program to help MS patients and their families. You can help, too.

WHAT IS MS . . .

Walking, talking, seeing, eating, tying your shoelace, lighting a cigarette are controlled by messages, or impulses, from your brain. These messages travel along nerve fibers in your brain and spinal cord, which are much like telephone wires. Each nerve fiber is covered with a fatty tissue, similar to the insulation on a telephone wire, known as the myelin sheath.

Sometimes, mysteriously, areas of this fatty tissue become damaged and disintegrate. In time, scar tissue forms on these areas. When this happens, messages to and from your brain have trouble getting by these areas. The messages become distorted. When muscles or other organs receive distorted messages, you suffer a malfunction. Then, symptoms of MS are present.

When messages can't get by at all, paralysis results. This doesn't happen at once, but progressively, over a period of time, sometimes years.

60% of your contribution remains in our community and is used for patient service—40% is used to support the research program, which is most vital.

What Are the Symptoms of MS . . .

Symptoms of MS are many and varied. Not every patient experiences the same set of them. A patient usually will have more than one symptom at the same time but this doesn't always hold true.

There is no predictable pattern to MS. Diagnosis is difficult and is based on neurological examinations and a history of symptoms.

SOME OF THE MOST COMMON SYMPTOMS OF MS ARE

Partial or complete paralysis of parts of the body

Numbness in parts of the body

Double or otherwise defective vision as involuntary movements of the eyeballs

Noticeable dragging of one or both feet

Severe bladder or bowel trouble (loss of control)

Speech difficulties such as slurring

Staggering or loss of balance (MS patients often erroneously are thought to be intoxicated)

Extreme weakness or fatigue

Prickling sensation in parts of the body like pins and needles

Loss of coordination

Tremors of hands

For All of Your Building Needs

During this "clean-up, paint-up" time of year, Lee Lumber Co., 301 E. Washington Ave. in East Point, is offering especially low prices on many of their Devoe paints.

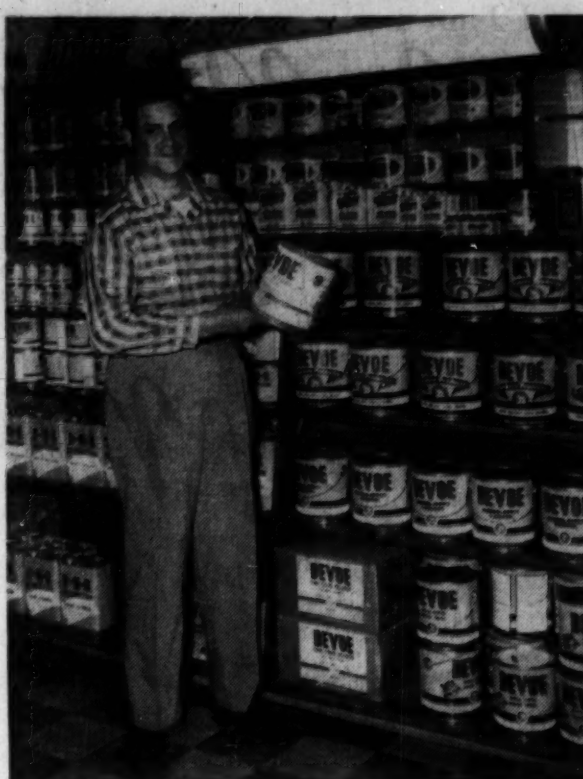

"If the outside paint on your house is beginning to chalk, flake or look dull, you'll want to take advantage of Lee's special sale on Devoe outside white paint. Also available at these same low prices are Devoe porch and floor enamel paints, with a wide selection of colors to choose from," stated Ed Watkins, manager of the firm.

"In buying paints, professionals and 'do-it-yourselfers' look for durability as well as beauty, and in Devoe they find both qualities. 'Know-how' means a lot in the making of good paint. Devoe uses its 204 years of know-how to its best advantage in producing superior paint," the official continued.

Devoe excels in many ways as a top-quality paint. Whether you're a professional or beginner, you'll find that this paint is easy to apply, and there's no worry about bubbling. Even on bare masonry, freshly painted surfaces, or in fact any form of surface, Devoe has lasting adhesion when applied.

"Devoe vinyl wonder tones and masonry paint are the best in the latex field for color uniformity," Mr. Watkins explained. "Incidentally, Devoe vinyls, in a two-year exposure test, proved their fade resistance, showing practically no fading."

In addition to a wide variety of paint products, Lee Lumber Co. carries a complete line of building materials. For the con-

Georgia Cooking Champ Bakes With 'Admiral'

The new 1958 Admiral Slimline Automatic ranges, distributed in Georgia by the Charles S. Martin Distributing Co., will help every homemaker win the "No. One" vote from the hardest jury of all... the family.

Brides and old-timers in the cooking game can benefit from the same features that helped Linda Humphrey, Macon, Ga., when the cherry pie she baked on an Admiral range made her the Georgia Cherry Pie Champ.

This is also the same range chosen by experts to bake the world's best cherry pies, during the National Red Cherry Pie Baking Contest held this past February in Chicago. Contestants from the 48 states plus Hawaii, Canada and Alaska took part in this best pie-baking event which offered five Admiral Imperial ranges as prizes to the national regional winners.

Here's a low-cost Admiral that can make a best cook out of you! It's the Admiral model 3080. This exceptional appliance features the largest oven in a 30-inch range, space that permits today's housewife more than enough room to cook her entire meal at one time.

This Admiral range also features four full-range seven-heat surface unit controls and single dial oven control with automatic oven preheat. These controls let you choose just the right temperature for every food you can cook. The recessed top catches spill-overs, and it is divided to give you extra work space. Cleaning is easier with this Admiral for the oven door is removable.

This Admiral model is truly the best range buy for the dollar. It has been designed to give the modern "built-in" look to your kitchen without expensive remodeling costs. See this Admiral range soon. It's priced to retail at the surprisingly low cost of only $149.95.

Consult the yellow pages of your phone book for the Admiral dealer nearest you or contact Charles S. Martin Distributing Co., 1000 Marietta Street, NW, telephone TR. 6-3392.

Builders Enthusiastic About Empire's 'Counterflow Action'

"Counter Flow Action," a sensation new heating discovery featured exclusively in the 1958 Empire wall recessed gas heaters, is rapidly bringing a new era of comfort and pleasure for Georgia families this winter.

This timely announcement was made today by Alan Rumbold, head of Rumbold & Co., Inc. This organization is one of the South's oldest and largest distributors of gas heating equipment for both home and commercial use.

"Empire's counter-flow action blankets the entire room from floor to ceiling with even, comfortable heat," stated Rumbold. "With the new Empire heater, there are no more drafts, chilly corners or cold floors. Instead, you are assured of the same even, enjoyable temperature from carpet to ceiling."

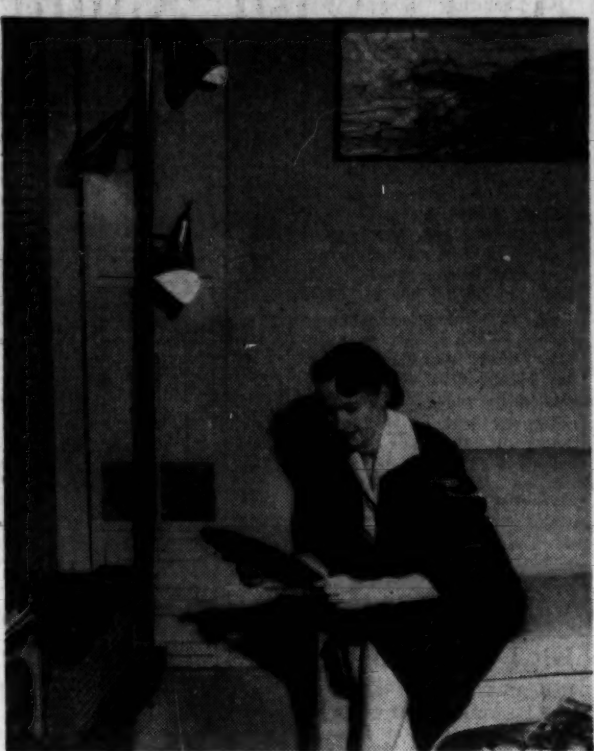

The principle of this counter-flow action is a triumph of design for engineers of the Empire Stove Co., Belleville, Ill. Recognized as some of the nation's largest manufacturers of floor and wall-type furnaces, this organization has pioneered many innovations in heating equipment. However, this victory over "cold floors" through counter-flow action is being hailed as their greatest achievement. No other gas wall-recessed heater possesses this feature.

"The counter-flow action draws in return air near the ceiling and delivers heated air near the floor, where it can rise naturally and warm all parts of the room. The heater has a powerful, but quiet blower, which gently circulates the air to every corner," explained Rumbold.

Ordinary wall-recessed heaters suck in cold air at the floor. This causes floors to be cool and drafty. And other wall-recessed heaters discharge heated air at the ceiling where it tends to rise and stay, thereby causing upper areas for the room to be hot and stifling. Only a part of the room is really comfortable.

Empire engineers also equipped this smart, modern heater with a new Honeywell thermostat. The gas is shut off automatically any time the outlet air is about 250 degrees. The wall-type thermostat gives you fingertip temperature control. Just set it and forget it. It maintains heat at any level you desire.

In urging home builders and property owners to see the Empire gas wall recessed heater at their dealer's, Rumbold, himself a veteran heating engineer, calls attention to the new-type improved combustion chamber. "It helps cut down on your fuel bills," he points out. "The brand-new tubular construction with special burner design permits the passage of long fingers of flame into the inner tubes for maximum efficiency and savings on fuel. More heat is recovered and delivered to the room, and radiating heat is utilized to the fullest."

Another outstanding feature is the automatic pilot (100 per cent cut-off type). It protects you in case the flame is extinguished. If the flame goes out, the gas is automatically cut off. It is approved by the American Gas Assn. for safety requirements.

The Empire wall recessed gas heater is easily and inexpensively installed. It saves space, projecting only 5 1/2 inches from the wall at top and only 1 1/2 inches at the bottom. All models are 75 inches high and come in two widths, 16 and 18 inches, depending on the single or dual model types. It uses no floor space, and is raised from the floor level, so that it doesn't interfere with wall-floor coverings. It requires no expensive, unsightly ductwork, relying on its exclusive counter flow action for effective heat distribution.

This Empire gas heater uses natural and LP (bottled) gas. "All of the disturbing warming-up noises, so prevalent among ordinary wall recessed heaters, have been 'engineered' out of these new models. More heat is recovered, and through its economical operation results in 15% fuel savings over ordinary wall heaters."

Other than wall recessed gas heaters, Empire also manufactures gas floor furnaces, which feature "Miracle Flow Heat" and the new Empire Imperial, with exclusive "Triple-Therm Heat." Your nearest Empire dealer will be glad to assist you in choosing the heater to best suit your needs.

For the name of your nearest Empire dealer, call JA. 4-3652, or write Rumbold & Co., Inc., 379 Nelson St., S.W., Atlanta. Property owners are urged to see the new Empire models now and plan for installation for the forthcoming cold weather season. Established in 1930, Rumbold & Co., Inc., distributes many nationally known lines. In addition to Empire furnaces, Rumbold is distributor for Permagas water heaters, Cyclotherm steam generators (20 hp. to 500 hp. for industrial use), Johns-Manville transite vent pipe, Oakland gas circulators, Utility central furnace, air conditioners and many others.

3rd Time in 5 Yrs. Gordon Wins Safety Award

Pat O'Brien, president of Gordon Foods, a division of Sunshine Biscuits, Inc., has announced that the company has received the state's top safe driving award for 1957.

It is the Trailmobile Trophy given annually by the Georgia Motor Trucking Assn. for the lowest accident ratio per 100,000 miles traveled by trucking fleets. Twenty-three Gordon's over-the-road vans traveled more than two million miles on rigid schedules to achieve this safety record.

In the five years that Gordon's has entered its Atlanta-based semitractor trailers in this safe driving contest three top trophies have been captured. The other two years safety achievement certificates were awarded to the Gordon fleet for setting outstanding records.

"Safety is no accident" with the transportation department at Gordon Foods Atlanta branch. Headed by W. W. (Pat) Flanagan, this department stresses the importance at all times of careful maintenance for vehicles as well as thorough safety training before any driver takes to the road.

Reed A. Blackwell, executive vice president of Gordon Foods, has recently announced the promotion of Mr. Flanagan to transportation manager of the entire Gordon operation. This includes not only the company's main manufacturing branch in Atlanta, but also those in Louisville, Memphis, Cincinnati and Knoxville together with sales branches in Birmingham, Nashville, Chattanooga, Norfolk, Indianapolis and Beckley, W. House Panel Is Making Sweeping SEC Probe

By LESLIE GOULD

NEW YORK—The subpoenaing of brokerage accounts of all SEC personnel and members of their immediate families is the most sweeping such inquiry ever by a congressional committee.

The committee making the inquiry is properly called the House special subcommittee on legislative oversight.

There is more than a little "oversight" in and by the SEC. The CAB, the FCC and the FPC are other agencies where there has been more than a little "oversight" in their regulatory functioning.

The SEC inquiry may be five or more years late. The opportunities for big killings in the market were when the utility holding companies were being broken up under the "Death Sentence" law. There were plenty of "leaks" and those with inside knowledge, which could only have come from within the commission, made big stock market profits.

If there is a scandal today in the commission, it will be the violations of the commission's own rules and regulations covering securities transactions by the staff and commissioners. These rules have been in effect for years and were considerably stiffened and spelled out in detail five years ago. They are stringent.

The House committee, which is a subdivision of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, will have to compare the reports it gets from the brokerage firms across the country with the individual's personal income tax returns and with the reports filed by the SEC personnel with the commission.

The same committee turned up considerable "pay dirt" in its recent investigation of the Federal Communications Commission. A couple of years back there was the "leak" from the CAB on the Florida route case.

Human nature being what it is, some questionable transactions involving some SEC staffers—past and present—also may be found.

There also will be cases of securities deals made in ignorance, as that of a commissioner not long back in the common stock of a utility which had a bond issue in registration. The commissioner, according to SEC Chairman Gadsby, was ignorant of the bond registration, and when the matter was brought to his attention after he filed a notice of his purchase, he immediately sold at a loss.

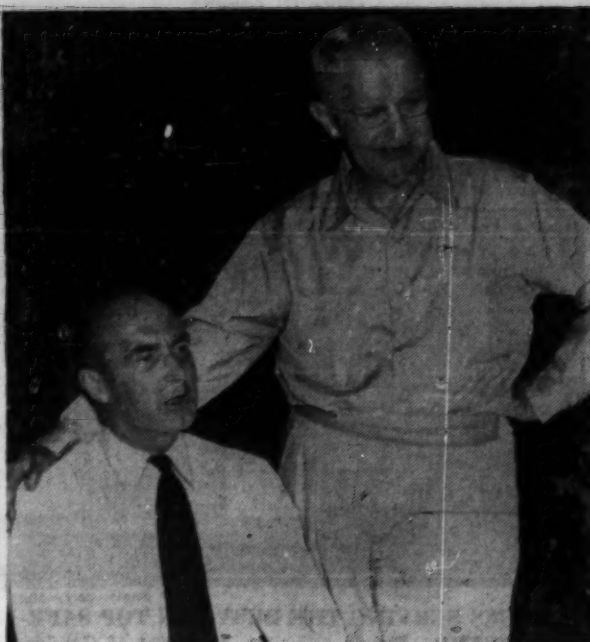

At that time, in explaining his fellow commissioner's action, Gadsby wrote: "The commission denies that activities which could be classified as 'stock speculation' have been indulged in by any of its members during their terms of office. The commission's rules of conduct are specifically designed to prevent 'speculation' by members and employees of the commission."

"The commission has never prohibited investment in securities by its members or employees. Such transactions, however, are carefully reviewed to assure compliance with the rules of conduct."

"The rules of conduct require members and employees to hold securities purchased by them for a period of one year. Consequently, 'short-term' speculative ventures are forbidden, whereas investment in securities is not prohibited."

BRITISH MINISTER LOOKS AT U.S. RECESSION
Guy Frederick Thorold, Seated, and Frank H. Neely

Slump Impact Light, Britain's Thorold Says

By JAMES SHEPPARD
Constitution Staff Writer

NORCROSS—The U.S. recession has not adversely affected the world's economy, except in small countries where demand for raw materials has decreased slightly.

That observation came Sunday from Guy Frederick Thorold, British Economic Minister to the U.S. Thorold also is the United Kingdom's director of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

SMALL IMPACT ON OTHERS

Pinpointing the recession's effects on world trade and commerce, he noted "smaller demand for raw materials in little countries," but "little effect on industrial countries because they have the advantage of getting raw materials cheaper."

Thorold said, however, that a prolonged economic recession would have a drastic effect on world affairs.

The Briton—regarded in diplomatic circles as Her Majesty's No. 2 man in Washington, subordinate only to the British ambassador—was interviewed as he relaxed on the Chattahoochee River farm near Norcross of Atlanta business executive Frank H. Neely, a friend of Treasury Secretary Robert Anderson. Anderson arranged for Thorold to visit Atlanta as Neely's guest to look at the South's economy.

Thorold will lunch with members of the Sixth District Federal Reserve Board Monday at the Capital City Club. Neely, chairman of the board of Rich's, Inc., is in charge of the program.

Southern Bell Telephone Co.'s C. W. Wilson will discuss and demonstrate the Bell solar battery at a meeting of the North Atlanta Sertoma Club at 7 p.m. Monday at the Dogwood Motel restaurant.

Sika Chemical Corp. has appointed Thomas Sea'e as district manager of its newly established Atlanta regional office.

American Institute of Banking's Women's Conference, slated in connection with AIB's annual convention this week in Kansas City, will have among four top speakers Frances E. Sammons of Fulton National Bank of Atlanta.

Simca South-east Distributors on Wednesday will officially open its new offices, showroom and parts warehouse at 3234 Peachtree Rd., N.E. The 5,000-square-foot facility will serve seven Southeastern states, according to Fred J. Walters, president.

Vickers, Inc., Detroit, engineers and builders of oil hydraulic equipment, has named Archie Laird as manager of its Atlanta office. He joined the firm in 1962. General Electric Co.'s Communication Products Department has named A. R. Sincial, as Atlanta district manager in charge of the firm's new microwave sales office at 350 E. Paces Ferry Rd., N.E. The Clemson graduate joined GE in 1961 and transfers from Syracuse, N.Y.

Hartford Rayon Co., New York City, has appointed Wesley L. Prince Jr. as Atlanta-headquartered Southern district sales manager.

Billy Graham One Verse Can't Hold All Truth

QUESTION: It seems to me religion is very simple. President Roosevelt's favorite verse explains it, yet preachers make it very complicated. Don't you think the verse in Micah 6:8 is the sum of true religion for all?—S. B.

ANSWER: You must have listened to me sometime, and by doing so you would know that as much as I believe this verse, I do not believe that it can be taken as the sum of all true religion. The reason is that many versions equally beautiful when taken by themselves seem to have one message, but when considered in their setting they tell quite another story.

The prophet who spoke these words was exposing that form of religion that relies upon ceremonial observances alone. The finest religious ceremony does not save us. Neither does an intellectual acceptance of all the facts of the gospel save a sinner. It is only when our inward faith is joined to the qualities mentioned in this Scripture that we have true religious faith. "What does the Lord require of thee; but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" is a truth that cannot be denied. But this must be inseparably united to a personal trust in Christ who is "the way, the truth and the life." (John 14:6.)

Burglar Steals Same TV Set Second Time

A middle-aged burglar who stole the same item twice in as many days has impressed his persistence on Detectives R. E. Finley and R. H. Sumpter.

On Saturday Eugene Williams, Negro, of 65 Bell St., N.E., reported theft of a 21-inch console television set valued at $298.

Finley and Sumpter located the set on Hilliard street where the burglar sold it for $30. They returned the TV to Williams.

Then Sunday the same thing happened all over again. Williams' neighbors said they saw the same burglar enter again and haul off the television set.

This time Finley and Sumpter recovered the TV set at a Decatur street address, where it had been sold for $30.

When the burglar is caught—detectives have no doubt that they will catch him—as they have his picture—the TV set will be returned to Williams, of course. But in the meantime, Williams figures his TV set is much safer in storage at police headquarters.

Can't Escape Judgment, Graham Says

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham told a holiday weekend crowd of 12,000 at the 16,500-seat Cow Palace Sunday that no man can escape the judgment of God.

"Judgment is as certain as death," he said. "The Bible speaks of a series of judgments, not just one."

"You can't buy your way into heaven. You enter through your faith in Christ which is a gift of God."

At the end of his sermon 434 persons went forward in "decisions for Christ," bringing the total to 17,935.

Sunday's attendance brought the total for the crusade, beginning its sixth week, to 505,000.

NOT SO DEEP

College Men Are Led Easily to Panty Raids

Take a cup of Spring, a tablespoon of study pressure, a pinch of looming final exams, a heaping measure of youth, stir together well. Result: Panty raid!

Several years ago the formula would have resulted in swallowing live goldfish. All through the years there have been shirital parades, pajama parades and pep rallies that got out of hand. Even panty raids are several years old now.

Sign of Immaturity

College men aren't going to like this, but panty raids are a definite sign of immaturity—no adults allowed. And they are a pretty good sign that college men are easily led, though it's granted that all know the way to the girls' dormitories.

Richard Lee, president of Tech's Interfraternity Council, put the quietus on a Tech raid on Agnes Scott last week by calling the girls' school before the raid could get under way.

"I don't know why the boys wanted to make a panty raid," he said. "Neither did they. They didn't know why or where they were going when they got together and started out. We've got finals next week, and the pressure has been pretty great. As Dr. Harrison (Tech's President Dr. Edwin Harrison) says, getting an education at Tech is like trying to take a drink of water from a firehose. There's just so much of it and so much pressure that the men will bust loose every now and then."

Here's an account of one panty raid, related by the undergraduate who started it at a college in Florida:

"A buddy of mine and I started a rumor that there was going to be a panty raid on the girls' dormitory giving date and time. We only passed it on to about ten other guys. But when the time came, there were about 500 boys there, milling around. Finally, somebody hollered 'Let's go!' And away we went. But the rumor had been too good. When we got to the girls' dormitory there were about a hundred cops and the whole faculty there."

"The girls were sitting around in the windows, hollering stuff like, 'Sissies! Weaklings! Come and get 'em!' Well, the boys tried, but the only panties they got were the ones thrown down by the girls from the windows."

It was pretty silly, but so were raccoon coats. When college boys quit being silly at this time of the year, there won't be any fun left anywhere.

Fly a Clean Flag

Atlanta drycleaners have announced that they will dry clean any American Flag between now and June 12 with the only charge being the owner's guarantee that he will fly the flag on Flag Day, June 14. Just take your flag to any drycleaner who has a red, white and blue poster in his window. He'll do the rest.
